fpora a place near Columbia, S. C., where a preacher who was trying to stir up a revival prayed, "Oh, Lord, stir up the hearts of these people to conversation if it takes an earthquake to do it."

Just then the earthquake came, and the preacher split his coat up the back trying to get out of the church.

Scores of incidents equally absurd can be cellected showing how vivid the imagination be comes in times of excitemens. Altogether one can never too earnestly take to heart the poet's advice:

Beware the earthquake's awful shock, Nor look upon the jabberwock.
