"O, pa;"

"What is it my son?"

What is that bright thing on your vest?"

"A bell."

"A bell." "What kind of a bell do you call it?"

"A chestnut bell."

"What is it for?"

"A sound by which one fool may know another in the dark, as well as in the sunshine."

"Does any one but fools wear these kind of bells?"

"Some times."

What others wear them?

To recognize each other without braying.

Does the mayor and city councilmen wear them?

O no

Why do they not wear chestnut bells?

Their bray is so well known that they cannot fool the citizens.

Don't Jackasses like to bray?

Not always.

Why not?

Because when they bray, they say to all who hear them, I am an ass.

Say, pa, is a mayor's tail as long as old Maggie? Wy?

Because if it is, I was thinking it would be a better place for a chestnut bell than your vest.

Correct.

Pa. What are you?

That is none of your business.

Well, I want to know.

What for?

Because. What?

Well I heard teacher ask Teaspoon Jacknife what his father was. If she asks me, what shall I say you are? A jackass or a fool.

Darn your skin, get to bed.

And he got just as the cast-iron bootjack struck the—well never mind what and broke it into fragments.

A Stubborn Mother.

Two boys in bed. Jim to Tom—Take take your old feet away, now.

Jim—Ain't hurtin' you.

Tom—You are gettin' over on my place.

Jim—Ain't

Tom—Are.

Jim—Story.

Mother—Children go to sleep.

Tom—Jim keeps on puttin' his old feet on me.

Jim—Ain't maw.

Mother—If you don't go to sleep, I'll come there an' whip you both.

Jim—I ain't done— quit that now. Maw make Tom quit tryin' to cut me with his old toe nail.

Mother—Tommie behave yourself.

Tom—Ain't doin' nothin', maw.

Jim—Are too maw.

Tom—Ain't—ouch! Maw. Jim's pinching me

Mother—Go to sleep this minute or I'll come there and whip you both. Not another word out of you. Just another word if you dare.

Jim—Gimme my pillow.

Tom—Take your old pillow. Ouch maw, Jim's a kicking me.

Mother—Didn't I tell you I'd whip you? Never mind, you shant go down town with me to-morrow.

THE BARTHOLDI STATUE.—The engineer in charge of lightning the Bartholdi Statue is striving to remedy the defects of the system now in use. Eight electric lights, which are designed to throw their light over the whole statue by means of reflectors, have so far only shown the goddess below her shoulders. The balance of the figure has been hidden in a deep shadow, while the torch seems to have no connection with the rest of the statue. The Lighthouse Board will provide for keeping a light in the torch. The committee have provided funds for maintaining the lights at the base for the present. After their money gives out the Government may be requested to continue the lights, if in the meantime they should prove a success. It is quite possible, however, that by common consent the base lights will be discontinued. The harbor pilots say that Bedloe's Island lights give the smaller craft no trouble and are of greats service to steamers.

Chloride of zinc, so much used in soldering iron, has besides its corrosive qualities, the drawback of being unwholesome when used for soldering the iron tins employed to can fruit, vegetables, and other food. A new soldering mixture has been found which is free from these defects. It is made by mixing one pound of lactic acid with one pound of glycerine and eight pounds of water.

A repeating rifle, invented by a French officer, can be loaded with its seven cartridges in ten seconds and completly discharged in four, and it does not require to be removed from the shoulder until the magazine is exhausted.
