THE PORTLAND PANIC.—The reported sale

of a controlling interest in the Oregon Steam Navigation Company to a California capitalist, Col. Hayward, has given rise to much gossip throughout the State, and especially has it caused uneasiness among certain business men, and property holders in Portland. We have already published what the Portland correspondent of the Bulletin had to say regarding the matter-that the "controlling" interest had not been disposed of. We have listened to the comments of many people upon the subject and read several newspaper articles de voted to explaining the case, but have been unable to put the stories togother in a manner satisfactory to our understanding. From all that we are able to learn it is very doubtful whether any stock, worth mentioning, has been sold. We do not in the least attribute to the building of the steamship Oregonian the cause for the sale of such stock as may have been. or is to be, transferred. Certain holders of the stock, possibly feeling that they might be able to make a more satisfactory investment of their money, wished to find a purchaser for their stock, and after stating the price at which the same could be obtained, placed it upon the market Whether it was taken at the price asked is unknown to outsiders-and we can't say that outsiders have any business to know But supposing that the property was taken by Col. Hayward, is there anything in that to create a panic? While at Portland, few days since, we found a few men who appeared anxious to dispose of their real estate at about 50 P cent. discount, in order that they might leave the place. How the transaction, as reported, could affect any man's interest in a manner to lead him to make such a foolish offer we are at a loss to say. We should think if he were really in earnest he could easily find purchasers. When Col. Hayward visited Oregon last summer he was very favorably impressed with the country. He found the State in much better condition than he had ever imagined, and naturally desired to become interested in its growth and prosperity. This is no more than what might be supposed would result from a knowledge of the resources of the State. It is exactly what all Oregonians have wished for, and we think that the nonsense of parties-who fear the consequenceswill have an influence in keeping capitalists out of the State, if those capitalists should get an impression that their motives are to be continually wrongly construed, and they considered in the light of putting obstacles in the way of prosperity rather than becoming instrumental in building up the commonwealth.

He will go order there, if possible, in time; to be present at the mail lettings for this District-on the 22d of February.

His arrival here at the present time is particularly fortunate-wish he had come sooner. He has succeeded in having all the routes advertised in the Oregonian, and will give what attention he can to the matter of getting the people to bid upon them. He will make a special effort to get to Washington in time to interpose against the danger of failure of these lettings for want of bids. And if no proposals are received at the day appointed for opening, he will endeavor to have the time extended to give time for proposals that may be forwarded now, to reach Washington. It was mainly through his efforts that the service between the Dalles and Salt Lake was obtained, he sending the bids by telegraph to Washington.
