Some future Agassia comes

To explain to the wondering children of Heaven

The puzzling marvels of Now;

Oh! I'll bother their heads with what's on my own,

If they ever should find me, I vow!

—Pretty Incident.

The other day a wedding took place at the Madeline church, in Paris, between a very noble gentleman and lady, and among the crowd that gathered outside to see the splendid bridal party was a miserable beggar about twelve years old. Now in Paris every one who has not something to sell is carried off to a police house—if they stop in the streets as this one did—and accordingly an officer was just asking her if she had anything to dispose of, and the poor thing was trembling in every limb for fear of imprisonment, when a sweet little girl, a sister of the bride, happened to over-hear the policeman as she passed by, and to save the ragged offender she quickly placed in her hand a superb bouquet she was carrying, and answering for her, said, "Yes, she has these flowers, but she asks too much and I cannot buy them." As she turned to go on, an old gentleman who saw and understood it all, stepped forward, and putting a gold piece in the poor child's palm, remarked, "I will give twenty francs for it," and presented it to the amiable little angel whose goodness had been more fragrant and beautiful than the choicest blossom that ever graced a garden.

Song of the Fashionable Girl.

Oh! bury me deep, with my waterfall on,

And my bonnet so tiny and gay.

Wrap all my fashionable gowns around

This form when it turneth to clay.

For I would astonish, long centuries hence,

The learned explorers of tombs;

I would rival the mummy in interest when

Some future Agassia comes

To explain to the wondering children of Heaven

The puzzling marvels of Now;

Oh! I'll bother their heads with what's on my own,

If they ever should find me, I vow!
