each man or woman is in himself or herself a succession of individual beings, and possesses, one after another, several successive souls? Our body is the same body at fifty as it was at five, and as it will be at seventythe same, subject only to the changes and modifications made by time, weather, sickness, or mode of life. Wonderful as it seems, the fat dimpled baby-body is the same as the withered, old, yellow careass tottering into the long-expected tomb; but our soul-is it the same? I trow not. Our estimate of things and people. our habits, tastes, and dispositions at certain periods of our life are so radically different from, and totally antagonistic to, what they are at other periods, that I think it is hardly possible that their variations should be accounted for by any of the alterations that it is within the province of time, sorrow, or any exchange in our outer life to effect. Perhaps, at certain epochs in our history, separated by varying periods of time, a new soul (in our sleep, may be,) passes into our body, each successive soul sadder than the last. A more non-

THE MISSOURI TEST OATH.-At one of the elections at St. Louis, in 1865, Gen, Frank P. Blair refused to take the stringent oath prescribed for all voters by the Missonri Constitution, and his vote was rejected. He at once sued the judges of the election, who had refused his ballot, for $10,000 damages, and the County Court of St. Louis decided that the judges did right in refusing to accept the ballot. Gen. Blair appealed from that decision to the State Supreme Court, and that Court has recently given its decision, re-affirm. way to the village that morning, ing the decision of the County Court Gen. Blair's counsel claimed that the conditions of franchise prescribed by Missouri partook of the nature of an ex post facto law, so far as the United States Constitution is concerned, and he also urged as a pre cedent the decision of the United States Supreme Court against the unconstitutionality of the oath required by the Missouri Constitution from ministers of the Gospel. The State Supreme Court Judges, however, decided against the ex post fac to argument, and decided also against allowing the precedent which was cited. The ground on which the decision was made was that the prac tice of a profession is a natural and absolute right, while that of voting is a vested right.
