

CORRESPONDENCE.

WINTER Scenes in the Country.

EN TERPRISE.
Thinking that a sketch of winter life in the country may not prove uninteresting to your readers, I propose with your permission to give a few pen pictures, which will convey the impressions of one whose principal object in writing is to beguile the monotony of life in the rural districts.

Having given you fair warning that I am actuated by no higher motive than amusement, I trust you not look for the recital of a marvelous story.
Variety is said to be the spice of life, and if this be true it may afford some consolation to those who are disposed to complain at the dispensation of Providence which vouchsafes us a few weeks of cold weather, in place of the interminable "patter of the rain." This is the feature of the Oregon climate, and tends to corroborate the old Indian tradition, that "the white man always brings cold weather."

The small amount of snow which fell in January rendered sleighing possible, and the cold weather rendered skating excellent. No sooner was the ground whitened with snow, than the spirit of young America leapt forth, and accordingly sleighs, jumpers, sleds, and other nondescript articles, which can not be named—much less described—sprang into existence, as if by magic, and were made to contribute to the insatiable appetite for something new. Horses were gaily equipped with flags and streamers, and some, more enterprising than others, brought them of the "hedge of the hedge," according to the motto of every description—conies, hells, sheep bells, sheep bells, horse bells and tin pans were brought into requisition. Thus, who fully equipped a sleighing party rarely failed to create a "sensation." Accidents were not unfrequent, and many a fall "turn out" went down in the midst of much merriment, and furnished a starting illustration of the mutability of all things.

A few sleds were unroofed—some of which had been brought "the plains across" in '47—and stripped to the feet of a plating youth, whose antics on the ice were not unlike those of J. Ross Browne. What he attempted to show the Germans how an American would skate.

But there were others to whom the sports of the sleigh and the skates were tame and insipid, and who sought for that amusement suited to their tastes in the excitement of the chase. In the much wanted hunting regions of the Cascade mountains, where is neither to be seen the house of the white man, nor the hut of the Indian, and where the deer, the bear, the elk, and the panther, are supposed to abound in all their native freedom and simplicity, these hunters looked for a more noble pastime than the simple amusements of the valley. Providing themselves with neither scrip nor gun, they set out on their perilous adventure, expecting to hunt and to live among the innumerable herds that people these vast solitudes, when they would return loaded with the spoils of the chase, to spend the remainder of the winter in munching choice bits, and relating anecdotes of their perils and adventures in the mountains.

Arriving at the hunting grounds late in the afternoon, they availed themselves of the shelter of a friendly roof, which had been erected by some hunter who had been there before them, and after partaking of a hasty meal, they retired to dream of the exploits and conquests of the coming morning.
Daylight called them from their repose, and soon the forest resounded with the shouts of eager anticipation—each lusty hunter sallied forth, with gun poised, and knife at hand, ready to slay the first unlucky animal that peered its head from behind its friendly shelter. Soon the shouts died away and nothing could be heard, save the low stifled breathing, and the stealthy tread of the hunters.

Thickets were penetrated, streams were crossed, and mountains were scaled, and neither deer, nor elk, nor bear, was kind enough to offer itself as a sacrifice to hunters' ambition. The cravings of hunger began to add their influence and urge them to renew energy.
They separated; each determined to be the architect of his own fortune, and to win for himself those laurels which he regarded as essential to his social standing, as well as to his character as a hunter. Forgetting for the time the torments of hunger and fatigue—visions of every thing but the one great object, dislodging a stag from his perch, might have been to draw his stable curtain round them. Re-creating their steps in the direction towards camp, they all arrived long after midnight, weary, silent and sad, but still undaunted.

"Without a word of gain to tempt their palate, they set about preparing a meal from the scanty remains of the stock of provisions they had brought from home. How shall I describe the agony of soul which they discovered that a voracious dog, which had been left to guard the camp, had made himself "master of the situation," and profiting by the importance of his position, had executed a brilliant maneuver, by which he had obtained a succumbent repast, and with utter recklessness of conscience, had selected such as suited his taste and left only bones and crumbs for our hungry hunters.
I will not attempt a description of that repast; it will repeat the exclamations which were heard upon the poor canine gourmandizer. His plethoric excrements, and fully told, would plainly the story of his life.
Heath never comes too soon to them that are prepared," and may we not hope that this voracious dog was prepared to see the death of the hunters who had secured the discovery of his treachery?
The balance of my story is easily told. Hunter, like necessity, knows no law—neither our hunters returned from the mountains, repudiating to themselves the wares of Paris.

DALY & STEVENS—This firm have removed their place of business from Morrison street to Front, No. 194, opposite McClellan's bookstore. They will give special attention to collecting and adjusting accounts, bills and notes, especially in regard to property, house renting, and to the general business of the city.

RECONSTRUCTION.

EDITOR ENTERPRISE.

The Democratic party having encouraged traitors and stimulated civil war, having exhausted every method in its power to perplex the Government, to dishonor the people, and to defeat most extensively, that the war was a failure and the discomfiture of the Union inevitable. The American people highly incensed and indignant at the insulting, bold, rallied and defeated the enemy by superhuman efforts both in the field and at the ballot box. But in the moment of their victory, when all prophesied the death of such an infamous and sneaking foe, stung at its own defeat, and prostrated by its own fratricidal efforts to establish slavery for all time to come, an unforeseen event occurred which arrested the disease dying at its vitals. I speak of the death of our Executive Officer by the hand of the assassin, thus placing in power a fostering hand which stayed the decline. The reeling and struggling carcass began to rally and to organize upon its old basis asking the people with much sympathy, to forget the past fratricidal struggle and rally around the old watch word Democracy—declaring that in its past history it is to be found the proudest records of our country and that in the future, as in the past, it will with patriotism, fidelity, wisdom and honor, grapple with the great questions of our Republican institutions in such a way as will lead us on to greatness and glory. But let us ask what has been their patriotism? Like that of Benedict Arnold. What their fidelity? O Judas! They fell headlong and their bowels gushed out. What their wisdom? Echo alone answers. What their wisdom? What their honor? What of Floyd, Breckenridge, and a host who had sworn allegiance to their country. With what meekness those who have systematically betrayed the Government and its legitimate halls showing conclusively that the anti American spirit which has these many years been the soul of the Democratic party, still survives and seeks to regain its power, by temporarily deserting its rebellious attitude. They are nevertheless the rebellious party and the irresistible tendency of human nature will as surely cross out when they see themselves reinstated as the needle will, when poised, point to the poles. All the devotees of rebellion are with that party. That profound faith in the moral rightness and political wisdom, which should characterize any party and which should be the main spring of its action will in all probability never be found in the Democratic party of to-day. The Democratic party is responsible for many great ills, among which are the repeal of the Missouri Compromise—the fatal effects of which they greatly bewail, the efforts of slavery to perpetrate itself, the Dred Scott decision, the doctrine of State Sovereignty. A doctrine which Washington, Marshall and many others considered as perilous to the perpetuity of our institutions as the staunch loyal men of the present time. Also Calhoun, and not Washington, was their modern political prophet and the moral instructor of slavery against the best Government in the world causing a national debt of over 200,000,000 dollars and the sacrifice 100,000 lives, institute the comparison with this high toned party. The Union party educated the public mind and conscience to that noble standard of justice and equal rights which produced emancipation, and established the Union firm on that rock of eternal justice embodied in the Declaration, which declared that all men are created free and equal and endowed in their inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.
The Democratic party delights to call itself conservative, and that it alone can save the country from destruction. Does any one suppose that the American Union would stand as nobly eminent in the eyes of the world, or that Republican Government would have that respect at this moment, at home or abroad if the Democracy had remained in power? Does any one think that resistance to the spirit of constitutional liberty is at an end in this country? Who believes that it will not rally again under its old motto, the noble Democracy is reinstated in power? Its face is turned, but its heart is not changed. She is still sitting for the same and maintains the doctrine that the Government of the United States has no right to enforce its authority against any citizen, if the State in which he lives releases him from his allegiance. The Union party. Every loyal citizen of the United States has rights in South Carolina guaranteed to him by the Constitution of the United States, therefore we wish that that sincerely, a true and solid reorganization.

BUCHTEL'S PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY is the only establishment in Oregon that is thoroughly prepared to do all the different styles of work in the art. Photographs from card to life size. The new Cabinet Cards, etc. Small pictures engraved, retouched in India ink—painted in water colors or oil, by Mrs. S. J. Ramsey. All negatives taken in this gallery, will be carefully preserved, that additional copies may be had. Mr. B. has no stock on hand, a very large collection of negatives, the names of which are given alphabetically in a book for that purpose, which may be seen in the reception room.
ALLEN'S LUNG BALM.—Charles Farmer, Druggist, writes from Ovid, Mich: "I have just sold the last bottle of Allen's Lung Balm. It sells like 'hot cakes,' and gives universal satisfaction. It is prepared by Stanley & Skipper, Clippewa Falls, Wis. 'We wish you would send a good supply of Allen's Lung Balm to the Territory. It is one of the necessary institutions of the country. It sells well, and gives entire satisfaction to those who use it.'"
E. L. Allen, a well-known druggist, at New London, Conn., writes that Allen's Lung Balm is favored by nearly four dozen bottles over my counter, and it has given good satisfaction.
Many letters like the above are daily received from all parts of the country. The demand for it from California is large for a medicine so recently offered for sale. We have sold hundreds of dozens to go to that far off region of gold. It cures, and has cured for its great success. None use it who do not, in return, recommend it to their friends. Hence its great sale. Say the druggist. Price 81 per bottle. (15.3)

THE GREAT MEDICINE OF THE WORLD.—Perry Davis & Sons' "Pain Killer," may most justly be styled the great medicine of the world, for there is no region of the globe into which it has not found its way, and no time when it has not been largely used and highly prized. Moreover, there is no climate to which it has not proved to be well adapted for the cure of a considerable variety of diseases; it is a speedy and safe remedy for burns, scalds, cuts, bruises, sprains, and various other injuries, as well as for dysentery, diarrhea, and bowel complaints generally. It is admirably suited for the relief of the sick, and for the relief of the aged. Hence its great sale. It is a very significant fact, that notwithstanding the long period of years that the "Pain Killer" has been before the world, it has never lost one whit of its popularity or shown the least sign of becoming unpopular; but, on the contrary, the call for it has steadily increased from its first discovery, by that excellent and honored man, Perry Davis, and at no previous time has the quantity made been so large, as it is this day. Another significant fact is, that nowhere else has the "Pain Killer" ever been in higher repute, or been more generally used by families and individuals, than it has been here at home where it was first discovered and introduced, and where its proprietors, Messrs. Perry Davis & Sons, have ever been held in high esteem. That the "Pain Killer" will continue to be the great medicine of the world, there cannot be the shadow of a doubt.—Providence, Ala., Dec. 15.3
