I have just been spending a month with a woman who was described to me as an angel by a man who is reputed to possess excellent discernment and rare judgment.

The woman is Eleanor Saxe. The man is Roger Platt. He told me she had a fair complexion beautifully tinted with pink like sea-shells. 1 nodded my head approvingly Angels are not supposed to be tanned, or freekled, or blotched. Moles and pimples, too, would be out of character on the face of an angel, I suppose, if, indeed, angels have faces.

He told me she had naturally wavy hair that fell around her shoulders in masses of golden beauty.

I nodded approval of that too. If an angel's hair waved, of course it would wave naturally, for probably patent crimpers and frizzing irons are inventions the angels have not looked into.

He told me her teeth were like pearls and as even as false ones.

A judicious wife is always snipping off from her husband's nature little twigs that are growing in wrong directions. She keeps him in shape by continually pruning. If you say anything silly she will affectionately tell you so. If you declare you will do some absurd thing, she will find some means of preventing your doing it. And by far the chief part of all the common sense there is in this world belongs unquestionably to woman. The wisest things a man commonly does are those which his wife counsels him to do. A wife is the grand wielder of the moral prunning hook. If Johnson's wife had lived there would have been no hoarding up of orange peel, no touching all the posts in walking along the streets-no eating and drinking with a disgusting voracity. If Oliver Goldsmith had been married he never would have worn that memorable and ridiculous coat. Whenever you find a man whom you know little about oddly dressed or talking absurdly, or exhibiting an eccentricity of manner, you may be tolerably sure that he is not a matried man; for the rough cor-
