CHARITY.

The following beautiful sentiments were written years ago for the Cincinnati Columbian and Great West :

The genial sun, which o'er The varied earth his gladsome radiance flings, Shines just as cheerily on the cottage floor As on the courts of kings. He gilds the mountain's brow And crowneth it with glory, like a spell. Yet shineth in the vale where far below The little violets dwell.

The welcome shower of rain Waters the fruitful field and barren heath. Makes the tall forest trees look green again. And wets the weeds beneath.

The dew, which falls unseen, In gardens bright where loveliest flowers dollars. glow, Falls just as freely on the pasture green Where simple daisies grow.

Why do men scorn to do As our Almighty Lord himself hath done! Who gave to every flower its drop of dew, To every spot the sun.

Why do they bend and smile Before the rich, the highborn, or the fair, And let a poorer brother pass the while Without a thought or care ?

Why do they turn away From hearts that plead from pity in their pain.

To mingle with the happy and the gay, And let them plead in vain ?

Why seek the place of mirth, The Lomes where luxury and pleasure dwell, And leave unvisited the lowly hearth,

Or even the prison cell?

A single kindly word

To sorrowing hearts, whose very hopes have died, Is better worth than thousand flatteries poured Into the ear of pride.

A single friendly deed Is precious to the peasant or the king, An act and word of love, are but the meed Of every living thing.

The following reflections on the above Shanghai. have never before appeared in print : Earth dost thou hide with mould the hand that wrole
