

THE SOVEREIGNS OF ENGLAND.

An exchange paper gives the following convenient method of fixing in the mind the succession of sovereigns on the British throne.

First, William the Norman;
Then William his son
Henry, Stephen, and Henry;
Then Richard and John.
Next, Henry the third;
Edwards, one, two and three;
And again, after Richard,
Three Henries we see
Two Edwards, third Richard
If rightly I guess;
Two Henries, sixth Edward,
Queen Mary, Queen Bess;
Then Jamie, the Scotsman,
Then Charles whom they slew,
Yet received after Cromwell,
Another Charles too;
Next James the second
Ascended the throne;
Then good William and Mary
Together came on.
Till Anne, Georges four,
And fourth William all past,
God sent us Victoria,—
May she long be the last!

✍️ Cora Montomery, editor of La Verdad an English and Spanish paper, published in New York, thus writes: The freedom of our institutions and the prospective power of the United States cause the greatest anxiety in Europe. The shouts of down trodden millions hail her growing greatness and see in it a promise of brighter, better days to them and their posterity. The rain-bow hope spans unhappy Italy. Crushed Erin sees the thraldom of the Saxon broken, and her warm hearted children free and happy. The wretched and the oppressed every where look to America as the young giant that is to restore to them their rights. These hopes shall not be blighted. The beacon fires lighted in 1776 shall blaze on every hill top of Europe, until tyrants shall be overthrown and each shall learn that he is a man. An ark of safety now, the United States shall be the guiding star to liberty. They extend a welcome and proffer homes, plenty and freedom to all who visit them. Monarchies may prolong for a time their tottering existence, but they will be routed in this the nineteenth century, finally and forever.

FRANCE.—An exchange paper says, six candidates are in the field for the Presidency—M. Lamartine, M. Thiers, Louis Napoleon, Marrast, Gen. Cavaignac and Caussidere. The Orleans party, it is said, will support M. Thiers, and M. Baranger, the celebrated orator, has declared openly in his favor. The Legitimist party, stands divided between Thiers and Lamartine. If the elections were to take place soon there is little doubt of the result for Louis Napoleon. Under the prestige of the Bonaparte name, and with his recent discreet course, he possesses a popularity which might ensure his election. The feeling exhibited by the French people in his favor is of the most enthusiastic character. If present appearances are sustained by future events it is supposed almost every electoral college will give him the vote. The election of Louis Napoleon as colonel of the 4th Legion of the National Guards has been definitely declared. Thus Louis Napoleon is on the stage in another character. Another aspirant to the head of affairs is Prince Danch Fenberg, the son of Prince Eugene Beuhaurnois, grandson of the Empress Josephine and son in law of the Emperor of Russia by his marriage to the Princess Olga, who, though a foreigner, is still a favorite with the French people.
