The page contains a mixture of text and images, including some handwritten notes and what appears to be a list or table. The content is not clearly legible due to the quality of the image. It is difficult to extract meaningful text from this page. The text seems to be related to legal or official matters, possibly from a historical document or a court record.

The page also includes a section that appears to be a physical description or a catalog of items, such as "Wine, Cider, and Beer." This suggests that the document may be related to the sale or distribution of alcoholic beverages.

Overall, the text is not clear enough to extract coherent information or context from the page. The page appears to be part of a larger document that might be relevant to historical research or legal history.

GOVERNOR'S VETO MESSAGE.

Oregon City, December 17th, 1846.

Gentlemen:

I return to your honorable body, the Act entitled, "An Act to prevent the introduction and distribution of intoxicating liquors within the limits of the State of Oregon." And as far as I am able to judge, the passage of this Act is the most important event in the history of the majority of the people throughout the Territory.

At the session of December, 1845, several amendments were proposed to the said Act and passed; but the new features given to the bill by these amendments did not accord with the views of the people; the insertion of the words "wine and in," in the first and second sections, and an additional clause to take away their rights, as it was considered a man had a right to give away his property, if he wished to do so, provided he sold it in accordance with the Act. This Act passed at the December session, 1845, as required by the Constitution; but as amendments may as well make it agree with the Organic Law, if it does not agree with it, it may again be taken up by the Legislature.

I am your obedient servant,

Geo. A. BELTRONY.
