

Resolved, That our committee be and are hereby instructed to maintain such correspondence with the committee of other counties, as best calculated to bring the producers of all classes into one united whole, upon intelligent principles of co-operation, for standing hand in hand with the producers of other counties, for exchanging products as dictated by mutual necessities, rather than suffering the way between us to be longer hedged up by speculators who would enslave the whole.

Resolved, That Messrs. David Lenox and David Hill be added to our present acting committee, and that they be instructed to secure a market for our next crop on advantageous principles.

Resolved, That from the time of our next adjournment, we continue to meet monthly, on the third Saturday of every month, at 11 o'clock A. M. for the purpose of discussion and action on all subjects connected with our prosperity and general welfare.

Resolved, That the secretary transcribe the proceedings of this meeting and offer the same for publication in the Oregon Spectator.

The committee respectfully invite attention to the leading principles of this article, as so much of correspondence addressed to committees, and every individual even of the other counties, who feels the importance of permanently opening a business channel to be owned and controlled by that part of the laboring classes who claim the right to possess the profits of their industry.

In behalf of the committee,
J. S. GRIFFIN, Secretary.

For the Oregon Spectator.
Mr. Editor—The humble attempt of 'Observer' to furnish information on a subject of great public interest, has been assailed in a late number of the Spectator, by a writer under the signature M., with a degree of asperity of which it is impossible to conceive the object or design. 'Observer's' statements being founded on plain business results, are so simple in themselves, that any person of common sense may understand their import, and any person so disposed may easily test their correctness; the prices of wheat and the rates of transport being well known to the farming and mercantile community of this country. A plain statement is however, a matter that 'M.' will not believe; its very simplicity is perplexing, and the strongest assurance of truth only serves the more readily to overcome his wavering faith; for, he was taught in youth that all men are deceivers, and the experience of his riper years has, alas! confirmed the force of that precocious lesson of wisdom.

No man, Mr. Editor, can produce a stronger claim to sympathy, than the victim of suspicion. The suspicious temper finds aliment in 'trifles light as air;' and is the source of endless vexation to the unhappy being on whom nature or education has bestowed that unenviable possession. He who has never found truth in man, must have been unfortunate indeed in his experience, and in his association with his fellow beings.

For my own part, Mr. Editor, I love to look at the bright side of human nature, to survey that true nobility of soul, which, reposing in the calm of conscious integrity, sees its own image reflected in the minds of other men, and judging of their actions by its own upright motives, can venture to believe that virtue has not altogether fled the earth.

It is with much reluctance, Mr. Editor, that I now occupy your time with idle controversies; it appears however, but an act of justice to renew the assurance, that the information in my former communication is authentic, as may be proved on the clearest evidence, from the documents I examined. When 'M.' has read and understands what I then wrote on the subject, he will find that he has been fighting with shadows of his own raising, and not with the statements of 'Observer,' a fact which must plead my excuse for not troubling you with further remarks.
