

For the Spectator.
Adella.
Fare thee well, and forever, the day dream is ended,
Two bluffs and bright, but 'tis o'er, And the hope which with fear in my bosom was blended,
Can cheer me to gladness no more.
Oh! 'tis maddening to think on the deep draughts of pleasure, I have drunk unrebuked from thine eye,
And to feel that the hearts loved and holiest treasure,
Is the first that can wither and die.
I do not upbraid thee, but surely, beguiling Thine heart into hope was unkind,
And to rob it of peace with a brow ever smiling, Has left anguish and sorrow behind.
Yet truly, though vain is the wish to forget thee, And 'tis folly, though ne'er can I cease to regret Thee,
To tell thee the anguish I feel.
Yet think not of me, though unloved and forsaken,
This world is a desert to me, I would not that grief such as mine should awaken
One moment of sorrow to thee.

For the Spectator.
Bachelor Claims.
Everybody knows what bachelor claims are; or if they don't, they should, as they are so ways scarce. The improvements generally consist of a log cabin, with nobody at home. Sometimes a disconsolate out is the sole occupant, poor thing; it will either run when it sees you, as though for dear life, or else come and brush your legs and purr as though it were really glad to see you, as no doubt it is. It will sometimes follow you a short distance and at last bid you adieu in doleful mewings, awakening a train of reflections quite in consonance with the characteristic of a bachelor's claim. Such inhumanity to cats, "makes countless thousands" mew. Sometimes such occupants (the bachelors, not the cats,) leave some laconic epistles upon their doors, to warn, or amuse those who may call in their absence. I remember one something similar to this, but as it was written in Jargon, with accompanying hieroglyphics, my translation may not be entirely correct.

Stranger, pause, before you dare Hound a thing or move a hair, My household goods are here collected,
And at present unremoved.
But ere long I shall return, When again my fire will burn.
Within I left a broken skillet;
And some dough made up to fill it.
And some venison smoked and dried,
And for my bed I took the hide.
That skin I certainly hold dear, For it's all the bed I sleep on here.
One pair of boots are hanging up—One old hat, and one tin cup; Some buckskin pants, that hold their form, Ah! many a time they've kept me warm.
But they shrank and got so small,
That I hung them on the wall.
There, I told you all that's here, So you need not linger near;
But leave my household goods alone,
And let each man enjoy his own.

From Panama.
OUTRAGE AT CHAGRES. We have heard a letter read, dated Chagres, 20th instant, the statements in which are almost too horrible for belief. It is from a member of the family of Mr. J. Worms, a merchant of this city, who left here a few days since, in excellent health, for Havana, accompanied by his wife, child, sister, and a Dr.
Huntington, a talented young American physician, who had been on this coast for some years. The letter says that on arriving in sight of Chagres, the boatman seeing and hearing the firing of guns on the American side, refused to land the party there, and took them over to the native side. As the boat landed, Doctor Huntington jumped ashore, where he was hoisted by a crowd of negroes, who literally hoisted him to pieces! A negro then seized the child from the arms of its mother, and instantly would have dashed out its brains on the gunwale of the boat, but with the strength and determination of purpose which only a mother can command at such a moment, she recovered it and sprang with it into the river!! Happily for her and all the party at that moment, the "padre" or priest of the village arrived on the spot, and rescued her and the child from the water! Claiming to be French citizens, and not Americans, the priest, with some difficulty, got the party into his house, where they remained without injury, until Capt. Simmons of the British steamer, kindly took them under the protection of his flag, and transported them to the American steamer Ohio!

DEMON AND DESTINY.—Prescott relates that Pizarro, the conqueror of Peru, in one of his voyages, was cast on the Island of Gallo, with a few of his followers. When in a starving condition, two vessels arrived from Panama for his relief, and to induce him to abandon his object.
The Chalchicoche Gazette of the 2d, announces the death of the venerable and respected Ohio pioneer, Hon. William Creighton, at the age of 78 years. Mr.
C. visited Ohio in 1790.

To the Editor of the Kent Advertiser.
Sir:—A nice young, but well informed friend at Maple Grove Cottage, Bonahar-nois, C. E., furnished me with the heroic conduct of the pretty Miss McDonald, daughter of Mr. McDonald, late of the Hudson Bay Company service.
On Friday night, the 16th ult., about nine o'clock, three boys, aged 14, 8, and 6 years, respectively, went out a fishing in a leaky punt, on the lake of Two Mountains near Carillon Bay. The punt filled, and they upset, their cries for life and death were heard by Miss McDonald, 16 years of age, who lost no time in describing one of her little brothers in a punt of their own, to the relief of the sufferers; but previously had got another young girl with her-self that lived in the family, and a younger brother, conveyed to a boat that lay at anchor outside. She speedily got up the anchor, laid on the oar, and was at the rescue as soon as her brother. Two of the boys were on the keel of the punt, holding the third by the hand, till rescued by this nice young lady. I am also happy to inform you, that Miss McDonald, who displayed so much presence of mind in saving the three Canadian lads from a watery grave at Carillon, is about to be rewarded, by the inhabitants for her heroism, on that occasion, it is to be a gold chain.
Should the above meet your approbation would you please insert it in your weekly publication, and oblige, Yours, &c.
W. MCKENZIE ROSS.
Chatham, August 27, 1850.

The above was handed us for publication, and inasmuch as the heroine of which it speaks is a native of this Territory, we cheerfully give it place in our columns.
We take the following extract from a letter to the New York Tribune, written by a correspondent in New Mexico:
"It is remarkable how little will make a fuss in the political world. In a late number of your paper I see an article which treats of New Mexico and Slavery.
Men ought always regard the truth when they write. Everybody knows that this is no country for the farmer or our enterprising people of the North, and as for this ever being a Slave State is perfect nonsense for any person to argue. What would be the use of slaveholders bringing their property to a barren country like New Mexico? I have seen far more of Mexico than this preacher, and a more uninviting country for the farmer I never was in. Whole crops have wasted this season for want of water. Let folks go to Utah, Minnesota and other Territories, where they can live as Americans. Not to say anything of the sterility of the soil, our people would find an insuperable barrier to their prosperity in the habits and language of the people. To conclude this subject, I will only refer your readers to H. N. Smith's letter, to D. Webster.
It is lamentable to see how people will make capital (political or otherwise) out of nothing.
By the bye, I was about to forget mentioning that Santa Fe has been incorporated, that a police has been established, and that Santa Fe is a more orderly place than it ever has been. Nearly all the rowdies have left town, and this morning, notwithstanding that yesterday was the election day, only four offenders appeared before His Honor the Mayor, for being drunk and unable to take care of themselves.
Business is very dull here. In fact, there is nothing doing since head quarters were moved from here.
The Indians still continue their depredations, notwithstanding all that the Sacred Preacher, may say to the contrary.
They have run off the stock of the Boundary Commission, and while Col. Sumner, with his jaded horses and worn-out soldiers, are marching into the Navajo country, the Indians are marching into our Territory and running off stock. Poor Indian! exclaims the lazy politician; but while these men are sympathizing with the savage, the savage is scalping the white man and running off his stock. I have much to say, but must conclude, for the mail is just about to start.
Yours, always,
MACK.
