The Child-Violinist. He had played for his lordship's levee, He had played for her ladyship's whim, Till the poor little head was heavy, And the poor little brain would swim.

A Star Behind the Cloud. No matter how dark the night, No matter how black the clouds may be, Up in the shrouded sky, Hidden from watching eye, Glitters a star for me.

Madame DeStael and Her Antagonist. The greatest compliment ever paid by a man to a woman was that Napoleon Bonaparte, in the zenith of his power, paid Madame DeStael, in exile from Paris.

There was danger in such a woman. The conqueror felt it, and owned himself unable to cope with her by sending her to reside a hundred and twenty miles from Paris!

The Arkansas Tragedy. The Rev. W. H. Metheny furnishes to the Western Methodist, published at Memphis, Tenn., the following particulars of the shooting of three Methodist ministers at Fort Douglas, Arkansas, a few days since, a brief statement in regard to which has already been published.

Suppressed, of course. The following also was summarily cut: "Good taste in literature is, in some respects, like order under despotism; it concerns us to examine at what price it is purchased."

This passage, Madame De Stael records, provoked the censor to extreme ill-humor. She said that, if these remarks were true, no man could obtain, nor even ask, a place. Out with it all!

This, too, was suppressed. The publisher, having submitted to every exaction of the censor, supposed it was safe to proceed. The work was put in type, and ten thousand copies were printed.

It cost her nearly two years of effort before she succeeded in reaching England, so completely was Napoleon master of the continent. After the expulsion of the tyrant she hastened to Paris, where she remained during the Hundred Days un molested.

At the moment of the injection of food a flow of saliva in the mouth is produced, in the ejection of which a motion curiously resembling the action of chewing is remarked; he can distinguish between warm and cold substances, but otherwise all are indifferent to him.

Rowland Hill's Exhortation. For ten years Rowland Hill, the great preacher, that singular mixture of wisdom, drollery and piety, was an itinerant, and his ministry was attended by vast crowds.

Cooking for Health. There is no more important branch of "preventive medicine" than cooking. Bad cooking may cause a dwindling of the race, ruination of the temper, and deterioration of the morals.

Young Housekeepers. Arrange your work systematically; by so doing you will accomplish more—less for waiting, receiving visitors, etc.

Wonderful Surgical Experiment. English surgical and physiological students will find in the Gazette des Hopitaux interesting details of an operation of gastrostomy attended so far with successful results, which has been performed at the Hospital de la Pitié, by Dr. Verneuil.

Washing Flannels or Linens. To wash flannels made yellow by age, dissolve one and one-half pounds of white soap in fifty pounds of water, and add two-third ounces of spirits of ammonia.

Cooking Cold Meat. Put the meat into a chopping bowl, cut it fine, season with salt, pepper and a little onion; add half a pint of drawn butter.

Sweet Bread. Parboil the sweet breads and let them get cold, cut them in pieces about an inch thick; put on salt, pepper and sage; then dip them in the yolk of eggs and fine bread crumbs.

Truth is immortal; the sword cannot pierce it, fire cannot consume it, prisons cannot incarcerate it, famine cannot starve it.

Peace or War? It is a peculiarity of this long confusion in Eastern Europe, that every attempt at settlement is interrupted by some new turn of fortune on one side or the other, which necessitates a new beginning.

How Theodore Stevens Earned $5,000. Many years ago, when Theodore Stevens was practicing law in Lancaster, Pa., he was employed to defend two bank officers who had been indicted for conspiracy.

Dr. Samuel Parr was a frank, eccentric Englishman, noted for his great learning. Some one asked him whom he considered the first Greek scholar in Europe.

A Country Gentleman was in the habit of entertaining his friends almost weekly, and discovered that regularly some small article of plate was missing, a castor-top, a salt-spoon, a napkin-ring, or something of the kind.

One hundred years ago the cheapest English Bible in this country cost not less than two dollars, and sixty years ago the price was little less, and the styles and sizes of the books were poorly fitted for circulation.

American Social Life. In an article summarizing and commenting upon the special letters to the London Times from the Centennial, the Saturday Review says: "Another feature of American character is the hasty, and restless pursuit of personal prominence or notoriety."

When General Jackson was a candidate for the Presidency in 1829, not only did the party opposed to him abuse him for his public acts, which if unconstitutional or violent, were a legitimate subject of reproval, but they defamed the character of his wife.
