A sad letter, and yet we have men telling us they will not give up sin because quite on the decline. No case of cruelthing to-night that would open the eyes of every man and woman in this assembly; I have not finished the sermon, but I do not feel as if I would like to go on. We have had a great deal of preaching for weeks, and let us pray that God may open the eyes of the blind, and those that have been living in sin may be brought to the Saviour.

Quite on the docline. No case of cruelty to animals, or even over-driving (perhaps the 2:40 trotting matches of racing men may be excepted) has met my glance. I have seen no street quarrel, no one handcuffed, nor heard one foul word or execration. Several cases of curious honesty have occurred to myself, while the general good nature and courtesy, and even self-forgetfulness, of the tesy, and even seif-forgetfulness, of the bulk of those one meets are traits abundantly noticeable. You may say, dear sir, that I take an optimist view of Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, which is said to have been occupied by a detachment of Russians, is called by the inhabitants Buccuresci, or the City of Joy. well for short distances. The jaguar traverses the widest streams in South America, and the bear and bison cross the Misout to sea, might sometimes succeed in reaching islands many miles distant. Contrary to the common notion, pigs can swim remarkably well. Sir Charles Lycil tells us in his Principles of Geology that during the floods in Scotland in 1829 some pigs only six menths old that were carried out to sea swam five miles and got to shore again. He also states, on the authority of the late Edward Forbes, that a pig jumped overboard to escape from a terrier in the Grecian Archipeiago, and swam safely to shore, many miles distant. These facts render it probable that wild pigs, from their greater strength and activity, might under favorable circumstances cross arms of the sea twenty or thirty miles wide; and there are facts in the distribution of this tribe of animals which seem to indicate that they have sometimes done so. Deer take boldly to the water, and can swim considerable distances, but we have no evidence Squirrels, rats, and lemmings often migrate from northern countries in bands of thousands and hundreds of thousands, and pass over rivers, lakes, and even arms of the sea, but they generally perish in of the sea, but they generally perish in salt water.
