I have often read about the ludicrous mistakes which types sometimes make in "setting up" articles. I have attributed such mistakes either to the poor penmanahip of correspondents and editors or to the funciful imagination of reporters hard up for items. Now I pride myself that for an old man I write a steady and legible hand, but judging from some of the words that your types made me say last week, my know that my articles are set up by a nice young lady in your employ, I would infer-that your "devil" had a hand in "fixing" mylast. It is all right, lovever, Mr. Eraron, bly too busy to cerrect proof, Mistakes will happen in the best regulated newspawonderful amount of work in the way of dailies in our Eastern cities, where "copy" even in the leading papers on this Coast, is a rarity indeed.
