One of the Committee.

It was one of the advance committee of four that met General Grant on the 15th of October at the camp of the latter, who asked the cause of a sudden grating and rattling heard beneath the deck while the party were conversing.

"That's the steering gear," replied the ex-President; "we are quite used to the sound now."

"Ah! that reminds me," returned the committee man, who, as is well known, is the sole lessee and proprietor of the Pacific Coast, "that reminds me that I'm afraid we shall have to call on you to stand at the nation's helm for another four years, General. How does that strike you, eh?"

"I think," said the General, thoughtfully, after a pause, while every ear was strained to catch his reply; "I think Captain Maury ought to receive a vote of thanks for having some of the best port wine on this steamer I have come across during my entire trip."

And while everybody but the questioner grinned, the silence might have been cut with a knife.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—John Quincy Adams accepts the Democratic nomination for governor.

The Pillaged Agency. RAWLINS, W. T., Oct. 15.—On entering the agency a scene of quiet desolation presented itself. All the buildings except one were burned to the ground, and not a living thing in sight except the command. The Indians had taken everything except the flour and decomposed. The women and children were missing and nothing whatever could be found to indicate what had become of them.
