FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1903.

There is always a demand for a better article, a better effort in any art, or a better service of any kind, than those before produced. When you are sure yours is the better effort, push it. Get it before the people. Talent in art or invention is one thing. Talent for pushing that art or invention is quite another. You must be successful, have both. The world rewards the man who makes himself known. Hundreds of able inventors and artists fail because they do not understand the art of pushing themselves before the world.—
Prentice Mulford.

The president will probably feel disposed to lay another weight on the Bremerton boycott, rather than remove it. His creed is that a "plum" must be deserved before it can be enjoyed.

The textile workers of Philadelphia, 80,000 strong, want shorter days; they begin to feel the universal thrill. The instinct of freedom is rising triumphant over industrial serfdom.

Reports from different sections of Eastern Oregon indicate that rain must come within ten days to insure the usual crop. In the dry sections, it will now be an "off year," even if rain should come.

Sheep are now pouring into the mountains of Grant county, like an avalanche. The banks are already full. The only way to relieve the great pressure is to trim down the herds.

Smith, the negro murderer who killed his white wife, in Portland, paid the highest penalty yesterday. Her acts crazed him with jealousy and one minute of folly cost two lives.

In three-fourths of the wheat area of the Inland Empire, a failure is absolutely unknown. A shortage in the remaining one-fourth cannot reduce the total to any alarming extent.

President Roosevelt's determination to probe the timber land frauds of the West meets with the hearty approval of the people. Now that the forest lands are in the hands of private individuals, the officials take great interest in "forest preservation."

At North Yakima last week, a 7-year-old child died from neglect. It was sick with some harmless ailment, at first, and its parents being believers in "mind healing," "mysticism," "palmistry" and "magnetic treatment," sent for a quack of no general education, who had "gratuated" in six months in his profession, and his treatment, or neglect of treatment, killed the child.

The Mormons have been ordered to leave Prussia. They are trying to interest the authorities at Washington in hopes of having the decree of expulsion rescinded. While they are a thrifty and industrious people, their religious beliefs and practices render them distasteful to the German authorities. It is hard to legislate a religious belief out of existence. While they may refrain from the practice of polygamy from fear of the law, yet if they were strong enough politically, they would undoubtedly reassert their belief in the practice of plural marriages.

The wasted energy of the world is almost as great as that utilized. It will require a year's constant labor and enormous sums of money to repair and replace the property destroyed by the floods of Kansas and Missouri. The cities that have been so severely damaged, must retrace their steps for a year, build up their shattered industries and apply their energies once more to work already done. If there were no steps to be retraced, no waste of energy, no loss of time and money, the accumulation of wealth would finally become a menace. The check placed upon it by loss, is one way of maintaining the industrial equilibrium. It is one of the counter balances of the world's machinery.

A NEW WORLD WONDER.

New York City is the new world wonder. No other city in the history of the world ever gathered about her such immeasurable sources of commercial and political power in so brief a period.

She has done more in 250 years than London has accomplished in 900 years. She has made herself the commercial queen of the globe, the central magnet to which every nation goes for its necessities and its luxuries.

From a hamlet of 1,000 mixed population in 1624, when she came into existence as a city, she has sprung into a vast municipal empire, numbering nearly four millions.

In 1624 there were only 200 inhabitants on Manhattan island. That was the year of the purchase of the entire island from the Indians for articles valued at 60 guilders or about $24.

The Dutch were not long left in undisputed possession of the site of the future metropolis of the western hemisphere. Eighteen different nationalities were represented in the population of the settlement ten years before the grant of municipal powers in 1653. There were about 1,000 inhabitants on the island in 1653.

After the incorporation the settlement began to improve. Substantial houses were built, streets were paved, a market house was established in 1658 and the same year a fire company was organized.

She was the gateway of a new world, and it is estimated that more emigrants have passed through New York harbor to enter America than ever passed through any other three seaports on the globe.

Gathering strength and vigor from the traffic of land and sea, drawing vitality from the chosen spirits of every race under the sun, she has gathered about her old Dutch hamlet the most remarkable aggregation of commercial and industrial forces ever collected in one spot.

And yet her process of evolution is no more remarkable than that of the entire nation of which she is the brilliant metropolitan star. America is a wonder—a collection of wonders. It is a realm of almost miraculous achievements. A land of quick growths, of spontaneous triumphs, of great accomplishments, and the sudden rise of New York City, is a symbol of the progress of the nation.

One of the great dailies of St. Petersburg prints a long wall about the enmity exhibited by the American people toward Russia, and recites several instances of friendly aid given to the people of the United States by Russia. The article complains that the American school histories contain nothing referring to the friendship shown by Russia to the United States at the foundation of and defense of the Union, and concludes as follows: "The Russian foreign office should publish in English a sketch of the relations between the Russian and American governments, beginning with the time of Catherine and ending with the Spanish-American war, from both diplomatic archives and American published records, and send the same to 3,000 American papers. If a third of this number notice the book a sympathetic movement would be inaugurated in the cause. With its tremendous importance, it is a great error to despise the American press in conducting our foreign affairs." If Russia expects to receive this hoped-for support of the American press, she will have to become civilized in her manner toward those who disagree with her on religious matters. She must deserve favorable comment before she gets it from the American. He has the habit of condemning wrong wherever he sees it, and the Russian idea of "lese majeste" does not unnerve the hand of the editorial writer here.

GOODBY MR. PAYNE.

Now that the president is back at his desk there will be something doing in the postal department. Roosevelt's attitude toward corruption and trickery is too well known to leave any doubt in the minds of the guilty ones what action he will take. They know that they can not "square him" or "fix it up." The best thing to do would be to turn out that adroit politician, Harry Payne, put in a man like John Wannamaker, who is as honest and fearless as Roosevelt himself.

self, and have a thorough overhauling of the whole service. The postal service is one to which no public point with pride and it must be brought up to the standard of the highest integrity as well as the highest efficiency. The public service needs more men of the General Wood, Gordon Taft and John Wannamaker stripe and less of the Platt, Quay, Addicks and Payne stripe.

CONSOLIDATE THE RURAL SCHOOLS.

Great interest is being taken in the Willamette valley in the consolidation of rural schools. On Saturday a meeting was held in Polk county to discuss the advisability of consolidating the schools at Zena, Lincoln and Lower Spring Valley. The argument advanced in favor of consolidation is that better salaries can be paid and therefore more competent instructors secured. It is also claimed that a larger number of pupils the school can be graded and better results obtained. The smaller students will be collected in a carry-all and taken to the schoolhouse. In thickly settled districts there is no good reason why the plan would not prove very successful.

The proposed merger of Northwestern woolen mills marks an epoch in that great industry on the Pacific Coast. The new combine will include nine mills, and will capitalize at $2,500,000. The object of the merger is to do away with the cost of salesmen and the sharp competition of trade. Each mill will be specialized and will turn out but one article and the output of this article will be gauged by the demand. At present each mill is manufacturing all the various articles produced by a modern woolen mill. Each mill has its salesmen fighting for trade in territory necessarily covered by competitors. Each mill divides its effort in producing stuff that is not wanted and in order to reduce expenses, reduce the output to the actual demand and to simplify management, the merger is resorted to. It is the universal tendency in all the great industries and will ripen into co-operation in time.

The following paragraph from one of Roosevelt's recent speeches rings true: "We cannot too highly honor him (Lincoln). The highest way we can honor him is to see that our homage is not only words; that loyalty of words we join loyalty of the heart and that we pay honor to the memory of Abraham Lincoln by so conducting ourselves as citizens of this republic, that we shall hand down undiminished to our children and our children's children the heritage we received from men who upheld the statesmanship of Lincoln in the councils and who made good the soldier's part of Grant in the field."

A. W. Machen has made $18,000 on the side during his occupancy of the office of chief of the free delivery division. The only drawback to his enjoyment is that the grand jury has found a true bill against him and he may have to do a suit furnished by the government for three years.

GULF STREAM'S SOURCE.

W. S. Howard, until recently attached to the steamer Blake, of the United States coast survey, is quoted by the Philadelphia Inquirer as saying that observations made by Blake's crew covering a period of three months, determined beyond a possibility of a doubt the true source of the Gulf stream, and that its current is controlled absolutely and arbitrarily by that body. Two years were spent by the Blake in tracing up the Gulf stream and studying its peculiarities.

It has been the firm belief that the Gulf stream was the continuation of the Mississippi river, while some held the stream was controlled by trade winds. At a point between Powey Rocks, Florida, and Gun Key on the coast of the Bahamas, is said by Mr. Howard to be the source or starting of the Gulf stream. He says the current there varies twice daily in velocity, and the difference in its flow at times reaches two and a half knots an hour, and the great velocity noticed was nine hours previous to the upper transit of the moon.

The average daily currents also vary during the month, the strongest current coming a day or two after the greater declination of the moon. In determining the true point of beginning or axis of the Gulf stream, the position of the strongest surface flow was fixed and was found to be 11 1/2 miles east of the Powey Rocks Lighthouse. The heaviest surface current there was found to be five and a quarter knots an hour, at least, one and three-quarter knots. The average was three and six-tenths knots. The observations showed the wind had no effect upon the velocity of the current.

PICTURESQUE TREES OF ITALY.

When the heart seeks the broad oaks or cathedral firs, it is the North that calls, and if, in Italy, the feet of a Northern stray into some unlooked-for "selva oscura," he finds himself presently thinking of home. For, in spite of great exceptions, forests of pine, or fir, or chestnut, the characteristic trees of Italy are detached, sharply outlined, impressive from loneliness and contrast. In groves, in groups, in avenues, in files, in couples and singly, they cut the sky, and it is the general treelessness of the landscape that gives to the frequent trees their peculiar beauty. They are so defined and individual that one remembers the expressions of a Tuscan city exacting only the members of its "compagnia," and it would be as easy to forget the dome of St. Peter's as to forget the single palm tree of St. Bonaventura. We have seen it from the Pincian Hill on a gray winter day, pale against a paler sky, yet distinct in outline as the convent itself. It looked lonely as a seventeenth-century ghost, keeping uneasy watch between the advance of archaeological excavation and of modern building.

I shall always remember a May morning years ago, when on the journey from Florence to Rome by way of Arezzo, I made discovery that the attenuated trees of Perugia are real, not fancied. It was my first lesson in the faithfulness of the Umbrian and Tuscan landscape painting.—From "The Lover of Trees in Italy," by Sophie Jewett, in the June Scribner's.

THE CAMEL'S HEAD.

"Where the camel's head goes his body follows," says an Oriental proverb. It's the same way with disease. A small opening will give it an entrance and when disease once has a place in the body a large number of ills may follow it.

For the past two years I have been a very sick woman," writes Mrs. Cheley, of 103 Woodland Ave., Creveling, Ohio. "I tried medicines from doctors and to no avail. At last I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When I started I was all run-down and had no appetite. I had severe headaches and cutting pains in my knee joints. My weight had dropped to 80 lbs. I am now taking the fourth bottle and am happy to say I feel like myself again. I can go up and down stairs and perform my duties as well as any one. Everything seems brighter, and I can assure you that life is worth living."
