COST OF RAISING WHEAT.

One of the most interesting and vital facts in relation to western farming, brought out by Rinaldo M. Hall, in the new edition of "Oregon, Washington and Idaho," issued by the O. R. & N. Co., and the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, is the comparative cost of producing wheat in the Inland Empire and in the famous Red River valley.

These two sections of the United States are representative wheat-growing districts and the facts are gathered from farmers who are farming on land and not in books.

The special character of the climate and the great diversity of industries that is possible on the farm in the Inland Empire, aside from the greater yield and the reduced cost of production of wheat, make this section the most favored farming country in the United States today.

Wherever this valuable book goes, it will attract the best and thriftest class of people to the West, by its authentic and detailed array of figures and facts on the matchless resources of the "Oregon country." Following are Mr. Hall's comparisons:

"The cost of wheat production in the Inland Empire is relatively so much less and the yield so far ahead of many much-advertised and boasted sections of the United States, that actual returns from harvest fields are often discarded by those who have not visited the region.

"Under date of November 8, 1902, Mr. John Carpenter, of Forest River, N. D., writes that the yield in the Red River valley for the year 1902 was from five to 35 bushels per acre; that the cost of raising a 35-bushel bumper crop was $7.50 per acre, and that wheat at that date was worth 60 cents per bushel, which means that the net profit from an acre on wheat land in the Red River valley that yielded 25 bushels in 1902, was $13.50.

"In the great Inland Empire, the cost of raising an acre of wheat ready for market is between $5 and $7. Assuming that it is $7.50 per acre, which, according to Richard McGahey, of Walla Walla, authority on the subject, never exceeds that amount, in the case of Samuel Drumheller, who, in 1902 from the uplands of Eastern Washington, raised 16.56 bushels from 160 acres, an average of 66 bushels per acre, at the market price, 65 cents per bushel, means a net profit of $5.664, or $35.40 per acre, nearly three times the profit of that from an acre in the Red River valley. To Bruce Ferrell, in the same county, who threshed 23,250 bushels from 420 acres, an average of 56 bushels per acre, it means a net profit of $11,962.50, or $28.25 per acre.

"In Eastern Oregon and Northern Idaho, where the cost of production is about the same and the yield equally as large, similar profits are made. Scores of authenticated yields of from 40 to 68 1/2 bushels per acre could be cited for the Inland Empire, 1902, and when it is known that the average wheat yield of the entire United States is only about 17 bushels per acre, the profit of wheat raising in Oregon, Washington and Idaho is readily seen.

"A. B. Conley, of the Grande Ronde valley, Eastern Oregon, threshed from his 7,000-acre wheat field, 1902, enough to add $100,000 to his bank account. Robert Jamison, who has farmed near Weston, Umatilla coun-

BAD DAY FOR DOGGERS.

The state land board, on Wednesday made a ruling which will swell the taxes of Oregon several thousand dollars. It went after a certain class of tax "doggers" with a rough hand, for which the people are duly thankful.

At the present time, on the records of the state land office, are between 400 and 500 purchasers of state land, who still owe small amounts on their payments, and as long as this amount is due and the deed still in the name of the state, the purchaser cannot be compelled to pay taxes upon the land, although he may be farming or renting the same, at a great profit.

EDISON'S FIRST INVENTION.

A statement that has been going the rounds of the press of the state of California, relative to the great number of inventions patented by Thomas A. Edison makes no mention of his first labor-saving device, which, though it cost him dearly, was never sent to market, though it did the work for which it was designed, perfectly.

TRUE RICHES OF THE WEST.

Albert Hubbard, lecturer and editor of the Philistine magazine, draws a true picture of the real values of the West in the July number of the Homemaker, a monthly publication of Washington, D. C., devoted to the interests of irrigation.

Speaking of the possibilities of agriculture of Montana, Mr. Hubbard makes observations which apply with equal force to the entire western empire.

"You will not find the true wealth of this state in her mines," says the writer. "These are wonderful, but far more so is the agricultural possibility. There is where Montana and the West will become great. The wealth of the mines is immense, but it is permanent? The returns are great, but the land once worked over, becomes useless.

"The farmer is the one who will build up the state to the empire it offers. There the wealth is cumulative and lasting. It adds to the richness of itself by successive cultivation and use. It increases in wealth as the fertilizing processes of the ages go on.

President Loubet did not stay long in England, but long enough, apparently, to even up the scores recently made by King Edward in France; and he is better friends than they have ever been since the time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

EMPEROR LOSING POWER.

The greatest effects of the German elections must be upon the position of the emperor himself. It must result, in part at least, to William II, that his charm and the charm of his ideas for his own subjects are less than had been imagined. He has dis-couraged to them of his divine right, and has been rewarded often with applause; but the applause has never been quite sincere.

CANCEROUS ULCERS
ROOTED IN THE BLOOD.

After the age of 45 or 50, when the vital powers are naturally weaker, it is noticed that a hurt of any kind heals slowly and often a very insignificant scratch or bruise becomes a bad ulcer of pain or inconvenience, and it is ten about it had not begun to inflame and itch; it would bleed a little, then some more, and large sores would grow. This continued for some time then the Cancer began to eat and spread, until it was a large, dark, half-dime sized ulcer, and it was determined to give it a fair trial, and it is remarkable that the wonderful effect it had from the beginning; the sore almost from birth began to heal, and after taking a few bottles disappeared entirely. This was two years ago; there are still no signs of the Cancer, and my general health continues good. Mrs. E. SHIRER, Wyandotte, Mo.
