Greatest of Skin Cures.

The Most Wonderful Curative of All Time

For Torturing, Disfiguring Skin Humours

And Purest and Sweetest of Toilet Emollients.

Cuticure Cintment is beyond question the most successful curative for torturlng, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases, by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humours, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing and healing the most distressing of infantile humours, and preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp and hair.

Cuticura Ointment passesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, hands and feet, from infancy to age, far more effectually, agreeably and economically than the most expensive of toilet smollients. Its "Instant relief for akin-tortured babies," or "Sanative, antiseptic cleansing," or "One-night treatment of the curs Resolvent, is often sufficient to the Great American Desert. Common Law Impracticable,

Justly proud as we are of the guaratees of the common law, its growth rom the experiences of the race and the innate justice of its purposes, there are some branches of it whose engraftment in this Republic have roven a serious mistake, and not east among these is law of waters The riparian rights theory had its origin under climatic conditions pe bundant rainfall made irrigation a subject of no importance to husban-dry, and the chief consideration was to so fix the ownership of water that somebody might be responsible for its control. The owner of the land therefore, through which the stream flowed was deemed the owner of the water and with such ownership wen the burden of its care. He could not change its quantity or condition, and use thereof for irrigation was not ar incident to such ownership. The adoption of the principles of the common law by the American were not wise enough to foresee ...e changed conditions, climatic and otherwise, which were to obtain in the western world, and the non daptability of the riparian theories to this country was unnoticed until it had become by precedent the settled law of a great majority of the states the effort of the legislature and the courts to correct it have given to many of the states the modified rule and such is the condition in Oregon Slow Progress of Improvement. The process of eliminating the er-or thus made in our basic law has the result, while an improvement, is still far from satisfactory, but happily there is a gradual, persistent move ment wherever the value of irriga-tion is appreciated, toward the Aric Region Doctrine, and sooner or late:

Region Doctrine, and sooner or late: every state possessing irrigable soil and favorable soil will reach it.

The state of Nevada has had the courage to cut Gordian knot, and her courts have declared that in adopting the common law, the state adopts on ly so much thereof as it is applicable. to the conditions existing there and herefore, as the soil of Nevada is de pendent upon irrigation, the commor law doctrine of riparian rights cannot obtain there.

Unfortunately for this state, wher its foundations were laid, the larger portion of the territory was regarded as a desert and neither legislatures nor courts, in its early history, felt alled upon to give the vast trans Cascade region consideration in the law. The valley of the Willamette and Lower Columnia constituted the homes and hopes of the fathers, and it is not surprising that there where water abounds, the common law the ory should have found a ready foot hold as a matter of course.

Forward Step in 1891. As soon, bowever, as the marvelou colorado and Utah began to attrac attention to the unrivaled resources in climate and productions of the semi arid regions, this state awak ened to the needs of its own vast area of kindred soil. The scattered irrigation projects in the eastern and outhern counties began to disclose ources of wealth and possibilities or homes of which the founders of the commonwealth hau not dreamed and of necessity the courts were brought by the force of public inter-est, which is always paramount, to approach, as rapidly as the conser-vation of vested rights would permit to the Arid Region Doctrine, and the gislature in 1891 supplemented the fort by the following declaration:

"The use of the water of the lakes and running streams of the state of Oregon for general rental, sale or distribution, for the purposes of irrigation and supplying water for household and domestic consumption and supplying water for household and domestic consumption and the state of t watering livestock upon dry lands of the state, is a public use."

The act of which the above language is a prelude, provides also for the condemnation of rights of riparian owners, preserving to the latter, how ever, sufficient water for domestic use and irrigation for crops actually Judiciary Is Up-to-Date.

The judiciary of the state, in appreciation of the great needs and possibilities of its arid acres, which constitute probably two-thirds of its territory, has in the last decade viewed with broad vision its importance to the future, and its intimate connection with public interest, and has justly endeavored to place the consideration examination of the arid region streams within the state and shall announce
