HEARST IS THE MAN.

If the democratic party will take a step 50 years in advance of the times and declare for government ownership of railways, telegraph and telephone lines and nominate W. R. Hearst on that platform, it will stir up such a huzzah of enthusiasm and confidence among the masses that even the glamour of Roosevelt's war program would pale before it.

Roosevelt is no doubt the most popular American living today. He has qualities of mind and character that endear him to his countrymen, until it is no immediate cause for party concern to have it said of a democrat that he is a "Roosevelt democrat."

If the Democrats expect to make any showing against such a man, they must center on a radical man of pronounced sentiments and build a radical platform which will appeal to the masses.

They must risk something. They must take a desperate chance. Cleveland nor Parker, nor Gorman have any of the elements of enthusiasm. Their platforms are tame. Their names conjure up no dreams of spirited combat.

If the democrats wish to offset the seemingly overwhelming popularity of Roosevelt, they must strike a stronger popular chord than he. They must get down among the masses, stir them up with something so radical and extraordinary that it cannot be put aside.

Government ownership of railroads, one cent fares, multiplied conveniences and comforts for the poor, opportunity for travel, education and enjoyment through cheap government fares, will wend the masses inseparably to the party that starts this popular battle cry.

Hearst's papers have said that the only remedy for cheap cars and horrible wrecks is government ownership.

The democrats can afford to take up this slogan. Hearst means what he says. His popularity is widening as the power of the press scatters and disseminates the radical and timely utterances of himself and his great papers.

The democrats must do something extraordinary to make a showing. While it would seem impossible to elect a democratic president in the face of Roosevelt's immense popularity, yet Roosevelt's sailing is not all smooth.

He must remember that the power, money and influence of the Southern republicans are against him. While providence has smiled with good crops and outward prosperity, yet the factory slaves, the mine's slaves, the mill slaves and the tolling masses everywhere, feel the cruel grasp of the trust on their throats and Mr. Roosevelt's utterances on the suppression of the trusts have been empty and insincere, because he has had a republican congress with him to carry out his threats against the combines, had there been any real meaning in his anti-trust tirades.

Hearst can offset the Roosevelt enthusiasm. He is young, energetic, Western, radical and sincere and has a brace of newspapers behind him that can checkmate any republican campaign fund, no matter how long the sack.

The East Oregonian commends the two amendments, the local option and direct primaries, to the serious thought of the voters. They are steps in the right direction. One of them stands for social cleanliness, if chosen by a community, the other for political cleanliness. The local option amendment will give every community the right to say whether it will tolerate liquor traffic or whether it will bar it. The primary amendment gives to every sovereign citizen the opportunity to exercise his choice in selecting candidates for office. It will relegate to the rear the political convention in which the will of the masses is usually disregarded and in which candidates are lominated by the enthusiastic oratory of a few leaders. It is the people's greatest boon if they will embrace it. It will make every voter a delegate to select candidates for office. It will give the voter a chance to kick before election, instead of afterward if the candidate does not suit. Think of it. It gives every citizen credentials to nominate candidates.

Cartoonists are the greatest living preachers. They can tell a story in a rough sketch, that volumes of words could not properly explain. Lute Pease, an Oregon cartoonist, has just drawn a cartoon on the Sunday closing amendment in the Lewis and Clark fair bill. It represents "Oregon" as a giant farmer, clad in rough dress and monstrous planter's hat. His whiskers are shaggy and his sleeves are rolled up to the elbows and his brow is wet with the sweat of honest toil. A diminutive figure of "religious bigotry" is presenting "Oregon" with a suit of Puritan clothes, with a copy of the old Blue Laws attached to it. The suit is ten times too small for "Oregon" and the look of disgust on the face of the honest farmer, as the little figure urges him to wear this 200-year-old suit, is stirring. It is not necessary to print a story with this cartoon. It appeals so keenly to the reader that it is its own explanation.

Because the Hearst newspapers pay such high prices for able correspondents that all the best in the world are in the service of that combination of papers, the Associated Press can only cry "yellow journalism," as its antiquated news-gatherers are "scooped" day after day on war news in the Orient. All the Hearst war news has been verified by the Associated Press correspondents, after they had time to find out about it. The Hearst papers are in closer touch with the news of the world than any other combination on the earth today. The Hearst correspondents have access to more throne rooms and high officials than any other class of men in the world.

If every public official in Oregon had the same conception of the law and backbone that Judge Ellis possesses, violators of the statutes would be more timid in their crimes. When he fined the 35 gamblers brought before him last Saturday evening, he told them in unmistakable English that they were not buying a license to further violate the laws by paying their fines in his court, but that he would suppress gambling if possible, and would fine them heavier every subsequent time they appeared before him. Some of the gamblers had been misled by the action of the city authorities, and thought the court would take fines regularly and permit gambling to proceed openly. Judge Ellis made it plain that he was not tampering with the laws of Oregon in that manner. He made it clear that he was not tampering man every day if brought before him for breaking the law.

It is a stinging rebuke to Russia to be refused a loan in the great financial centers of Europe, because of the ascendancy of the Jews on every bourse on the continent. Kishineff is being avenged ten fold, in this secret thrust of the Jewish money lenders. If the Jews can discredit the Russian government, by these methods, and embarrass it at a time of such dire need, the blood of their murdered countrymen slain in Russian massacres, will not have been shed in vain.

The shippers of the Southwest feel the grasp of the trusts. Fifty-nine railroads have just been sued by the Texas Live-stock Association for charging illegal freight rates on stock. What do the stockgrowers think of the Roosevelt crusade against the trusts. Soon Umatilla county stockmen will begin to buy the season's salt. They will be called upon to pay 100 per cent boot money because a trust controls the output. It is all the way the voter makes it.

All opposition to the corporation tax law has disappeared with the dismissal of the suits brought to test the validity of the law. The law is a good one and with some slight amendments in favor of the mining interests and irrigation prospects should remain in the statutes. The law produces something over $100,000 in revenue and has not prevented the organization of any bona fide corporations. Its injury to the mining interests is not as great as was first anticipated.

Tom Johnson, the most active political opponent of Mark Hanna, says of the dead senator, that he was the best representative of the sentiment of his party, intent, earnest and honest in his convictions.

Experts who have studied the war situation in the Orient, says the tactics of the Japanese could not be improved upon. Their plans to land troops and march on unprotected Vladivostok from the rear, cut off communication by blowing up the railroads and bottle up Dainy and Port Arthur, are brilliant and telling. Their every movement counts. They don't waste a shot nor a pound of steam in useless maneuvers. Port Arthur is now at their mercy. Vladivostok harbor is ice-bound and the Japanese land forces are marching inland to head off Russian relief by land. With this stroke accomplished, with the Russian troops perishing in the frozen steppes around Lake Baikal, with Port Arthur and Dainy left to the mercy of the Japanese fleets, it seems the end of the war is near and that Russia is losing ground every day. The Japanese have conducted their campaign with a spirited dash that has been the admiration and wonder of the world. Each staggering blow has been followed in such quick succession by another, that Russia has had no time for recovery between fights. The Japanese should win. Their cause is just. Had Russia kept her avaricious hands off the Japanese trophies of the Japan-Chinese war, this war would have been unnecessary. The world is with the Christians.

"Oh, rats," says Mayor Boyd, of Spokane, to the threat of the Ministerial Association to oust him from office for refusing and failing to obey the law in suppressing the immoral haunts of that city. That is the mayor's only argument, perhaps. The law is plain. He has no other answer. The ministers have chased him up the highest tree and the mayor is wondering what he shall do next, can only say, "Oh rats!" The Spokane ministers are to be commended. The city has failed to regulate the social evil and so they are regulating the social evil and the city also. They should have the support of the community. While their plan may be wrong, their motives are right. Instead of scattering the evil to the residence districts, the city should set aside an inclosed area, large enough to accommodate all the immoral classes, and should drive them into this inclosure and keep them there under police guard, where the public can avoid them.

"Profit" Dowle has found mankind much the same the world over. The people of Sydney, Australia, chased him out of town for blasphemy. Even the sinner is disgusted at the coarse and foul arrogance of this religious bizzard.

GENERAL NEWS.

There are 300 cases of typhoid fever in Watertown, N. Y., a city of 21,000 inhabitants.
