Those who have used them, as well as by the makers, the trouble for which I used them is principally backache, with which I had been troubled for a long time. I read an advertisement about Doan's Kidney Pills and decided to try them, feeling that they could not harm, even if they did no good. FOARMERS' MEETING

VERY INTERESTING GATHERING AT ECHO.

Industrial Agent of the O. R. & N., an Expert Creamery Man, and the Superintendent of the Oregon Bureau of Information Delivered Most Interesting and Instructive Addresses—Value of Judicious Advertising to the Entire State.

The meeting of the Echo Farmers' Club was well attended on Saturday, although a large portion of the citizens attended the convention in this city on that day.

Odd Fellows hall was filled with enthusiastic farmers, who came to listen to the addresses promised by Dr. LeRoy, industrial agent of the O. R. & N., and they were well repaid for their interest and attendance.

A committee of citizens met the speakers, consisting of Col. Judson, Dr. A. LeRoy, the Oregon Information Bureau of Portland, and Prof. Lee, a representative of the Hazelwood Cream Company, at the depot on Friday, industrial agent of the O. R. & N., and they were well repaid for their interest and attendance.

R. C. Judson was the first speaker introduced and spoke eloquently on the prospects before the Echo district, if diversified farming was introduced. He said that the production of that cereal, it was through the efforts of Freight Agent R. B. Miller of the O. R. & N., that corn was introduced into the district, and the people had shown their appreciation of the work of Mr. Miller, by following his suggestions by increasing the production of that cereal.

Col. Judson exhibited a quantity of amber cane seed, which he offered for distribution among the farmers of the district, and millet, which he asked to have cultivated in the best possible manner. If these crops were raised in the district, it would guarantee to Echo to work the raw materials into finished products, whenever the crops would justify the expense.

Col. Judson closed his remarks by saying the services of the O. R. & N. Company were at the disposal of the people of the district, and that the prosperity of the people was the basis of the company's business. He hoped to see the best town on the coast in the alfalfa and alfalfa district of Umatilla county when the farmers come to fully understand the value of diversified crops, and invite greater prosperity by growing a greater variety of products.

Hazelwood Creamery Company, was then introduced and spoke at length on the benefits of dairies and creameries to any district, and especially to the East, that has been redeemed by dairying and milking. He advised milk cows as a sure means of relieving the district, and that a certain profit to the farm every month in the year.

Dr. A. LeRoy, superintendent of the Oregon Bureau of Information, was then introduced and spoke interestingly of the work of that bureau in directing worthy homeseekers to the various portions of the state, where the opportunities were greatest.

He said wealth was not so much to be found in the East, as it was in the West, that was thriving for energetic, hopeful farmers and home-builders who would bring into the highest cultivation every waste tract of land.

He made mention of the extreme cases of ignorance concerning the West, often found in the East, and told of one very intelligent woman in Chicago, who asked him what part of California Oregon was in. He said that the great work of the bureau had done in placing and directing the homeseekers who arrived in Portland, in search of suitable home and business openings.

He told of the need of agricultural and horticultural exhibits from Umatilla county, and of the extreme interest of homeseekers in the greatest wheat county in Oregon.

He said the samples of products from this district were being eagerly carried away by Easterners, and that it was impossible for him to keep even his newspaper files free from mutilation by these anxious tourists and homeseekers.

Dr. LeRoy's address was interrupted by frequent and hearty applause and the club showed enthusiastically that he was telling truths about Oregon and his resources and wonders that were recognized and appreciated by all.

He said that 44 per cent of the total increase in population in Oregon in the decade from 1890 to 1900 had located in Portland, and that 20 per cent of the entire population of the state is now found in 40 square miles in the city of Portland, while the other 80 per cent is scattered over the 94,000 square miles in the state.

He urged the people of Echo to send in exhibits for the bureau, so

DEATH OF COL. BOYD

AN EMINENT CITIZEN GONE FROM AMONG US.

Passed Peacefully Away Last Night.—A Soldier with an Ennobled Record and a Civilian Whose Life and Works Were Above Reproach.

Col. E. D. Boyd, who has been seriously ill for the past year, died at his home last night at midnight. Several weeks ago it was thought that one of the business had breathed his last, but he rallied and seemed to be gaining strength from that time on Sunday afternoon, and received the title of colonel, and in several months, and seemed to be stronger and brighter than for some time, and he died suddenly, and worse, and passed away about 12 o'clock.

Biographical Sketch.

Edward D. Boyd was born in Lynchburg, Virginia, February 14, 1843. His father was James M. Boyd, one of the prominent figures in the state of Virginia in the commercial and political world. The son grew to early manhood at Lynchburg and there received his education, graduating from the University of Virginia in 1861. This was in 1861, and when the South rushed to arms to defend their state and homes, Colonel Boyd was among the first to join the ranks of the Virginia soldiers, who served through the war with Jackson and Lee. In this bloody conflict Mr. Boyd showed his brave and gallant spirit, which he has borne until the day of his death.

He enlisted as a private in the 4th Virginia, which was wheeled into the service under General Johnson during the war. He served under General Mosby, and was promoted to a colonel in his brigade, which he commanded in the Appomattox and peace had been declared, Col. Boyd went to Richmond, where he was with the division of the army.

When Lee laid down his arms at Appomattox and peace had been declared, Col. Boyd went to Richmond, where he was with the division of the army. He next went to Somerville, Tenn., where he was called to take command of the 4th Virginia, which he held until 1867, when he established Phillips' academy in Arkansas, continuing the term of that institution for four years.

Col. Boyd turned his attention to journalism in 1873, when he commenced the publication of the Arkansas Grange at Little Rock. At the same time he was the state lecturer for the Patrons of Husbandry, and was elected to the Arkansas senate in 1878, and he served with ability and distinction in that office for four years. While in the senate he was the chairman of the senate committee, appointed to investigate the condition of the books of the state treasurer and the amount of the state debt. His efforts largely, that a large defalcation was discovered.

During the gubernatorial battle of 1872, in which Baxter and Brooks struggled to become governor of the state of Arkansas, and through what was afterward termed the Baxter-Brooks case, Col. Boyd was a staunch supporter of Baxter, both in public utterance and in print, and when Mr. Baxter was declared to be the victor, Col. Boyd was appointed to the office of the governor, which office he filled for two years.

Col. Boyd next moved to Fort Worth, Texas, where he entered the brokerage business, of which he was president of the firm for several years spent in the Texas city. Col. Boyd moved to Chicago, where he engaged in business for some time. A little son of William Russell had pneumonia some two or three months ago. It settled in his lungs, and they were tapped by Dr. Plampton, and two quarts of pus were drawn. The little fellow seems to be getting along as well as could be expected.

There were 19 democratic delegates elected here to the democratic convention. North men send 13 delegates as follows: C. O. Henry, S. P. Purdy, Thomas H. DeLoach, Smith, Cass Cannon, A. L. Swagart, G. W. Gross, Joseph Scott, J. N. B. Peterson, William H. H. Stone, O. G. Chamberlain, and J. D. Dell. The delegates from South Athens are as follows: David Stone, Will M. Peterson, Jerry Stone, A. J. Wilby, Taylor Nelson, Sam. Boyd, and David Taylor, elected committee man.

About 100 people will go to Pendleton this evening to attend the democratic county convention.

Athena, April 12.—E. L. Barnett, after spending a month or more in Athens, left for Portland yesterday evening, where he will join his family, and they will return home in a few weeks.

Miss Sadie Harris, after spending several weeks visiting at Grangeville and Lewiston, Idaho, has returned home.

Mrs. Charley Frakes, who was partially paralyzed, has recovered her health.

A free concert was given last evening at Miller's furniture store. Johnson's orchestra and a few local talents entertained a large audience.

B. F. Ogle opened his summer pasture this morning.

A number of men are busy digging the cellar to the new Sibal brick business house.

Dr. Christie, deputy state veterinary surgeon, has appointed Henry A. Barrett to look after many horses running at large. If they are not dipped and properly looked after they will be killed. Mr. Barrett has already disposed of three castrates.

Athena Enthusiasm. Will M. Peterson, of Athena, is in the city today to attend the democratic county convention, being one of the leaders of the democratic party of Athena, which sends 19 delegates to the convention. Mr. Peterson tells glowing tales of the life of the city of Athena, which is fast growing into prominence as one of the best and busiest of the county, and of the eastern part of the state.

Last winter I was advised to try Pe-ru-na, and within five days the cold was broken up and in five days more I was a well man. I recommended it to several of my friends and all speak the highest praise for it. There is nothing like Pe-ru-na for catarrhal affections.
