DIVERSIFIED FARMING PAYS

Profitable Lecture by Prof. H. T. French of the Idaho Agricultural College.

TELLS OF TRANSFORMATIONS OF THE PALOUSE COUNTRY.

Moscow Now Has 100 Dairy Patrons and Ships 1,000 Pounds of Butter Fat Per Day at an Average Price of 26 1/2 Cents Per Pound—Dry Land Alfalfa Grows in Idaho at an Elevation of 6,500 Feet and Also Makes Two and Three Crops With But Five Inches of Rainfall—Wheat Growing Weakens Soil in Time.

The afternoon session of the farmers' institute was much more largely attended than the morning session, over 100 farmers being present, a large number of women also being in the audience.

The meeting was called in the court room, as the crowd could not be accommodated and the speakers heard more easily than outside.

In making his address for the afternoon, Prof. H. T. French, complimenting the Commercial Association and the O. R. & N. company on their enterprise in preparing this meeting for the benefit of the community. He said such enterprise was not found in many places in the Northwest, and the interest on the part of railroads was especially lacking in such things in Idaho, where the O. R. & N. system did not have a very great mileage.

"I wish to compliment your business men in this co-operation with the farmers," he said.

"It is a spirit that will result in business and education for the community and should be cultivated and encouraged."

State Institutes in Idaho. "In the state of Idaho we hold farmers' institutes under state direction, a fund being set aside by the legislature for that purpose. At first farmers were slow to begin this work, but the state pays for the lecturers and urges the meetings, and in many farming districts we now hold regular farmers' institutes, and the results are very encouraging."

"Farmers now take deep interest in them, asking questions and discussing farm topics with the state agriculturist, and the institute is now looked forward to with pleasure and interest."

"I can remember when the Palouse farmer would grow nothing but wheat. He thought that rich district was not intended for homes or orchards. He would sow his crop of wheat and then live in town until the crop was ready to harvest, and then move to town again and remain until forced to spend a few weeks on his farm, seeding and preparing for another crop."

"This has all been changed. The Palouse country is now a land of homes. Magnificent orchards, fine dwellings, highly cultivated garden tracts and every evidence of the highest civilization are now to be found everywhere."

Diversified Farming Pays. "The farmers found that their land was not only adapted to dozens of other crops, but that it demanded other crops to bring out its highest productivity. Wheatraising was not its best use. It required the cultivated orchard, the enriching force of the clover, alfalfa and garden crops to keep alive its fertility and add to its strength."

"The same will be true of this county. Wheatraising may pay well. It may be a profitable crop from the present standpoint, but it is certainly undermining the strength of the land. Unless you begin to diversify, you will change your crops, sooner or later, the land will begin to show signs of weakness. You must build for the future."

"One of the best diversities added to the Palouse country was her dairies and creameries. These have enriched the farm and the farmer. They have added strength to the soil and money to the bank account. Within the past 10 years there have been seeded over 10,000 acres of grasses in the vicinity of Moscow, Idaho, where before there was nothing but wheat. These grass crops, hogs, sheep, horses and other stock and make the income each year, where there was but one before."

"They are keeping as high as 35 head of cattle on 30 acres of grass there, and they are fat the year around, besides the hogs and sheep that are necessary for home use. In your county, between Pendleton and Milton, I counted but 12 head of cattle yesterday, and they were in the hands of the same owners. It is the grass is the foundation of agriculture. Where a strong native grass grows vigorously, abundantly, any other agricultural industry is nourished. If you raise nothing but wheat, it is impossible to keep stock on your farm. You have the one income and the weakest years' resources near by, your reducing the strength of the soil."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AT GETTYSBURG

To a little crowd that gathered just before leaving, the president spoke from the rear platform, expressing the pleasure of the meeting. The train stopped at Reynolds avenue, where the party entered carriages and was driven over the battlefield. Luncheon was served at the Eagle hotel.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Gettysburg, May 30.—In the presence of 100,000 people assembled to honor the noble dead of the united country, President Roosevelt delivered the following memorial address on the battlefield of Gettysburg.

The president said in part: "The names of the men who are here have a double distinction. Here was fought one of the great battles of all time, and here was spoken one of the noblest speeches that ever came from the lips of a man. It is the memory of the battle of Gettysburg, likewise endured and known; and as long as the English tongue is understood, so long shall Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech thrill the hearts of nations, and the supremacy of the national law throughout the length and breadth of the land."

Moreover, this was one of those rare contests in which it was to the immeasurable interest of the vanquished that they should lose, while the victors acquire the precious privilege of transmitting to those who came after them, as a heritage of honor forever, not only the memory of practical valor, but deeds, but the memory of the deeds of those who, no less valiantly and with equal sincerity of purpose, fought against the stars in their courses.

All are at one now, the sons of those who wore the blue and the sons of those who wore the gray, and all to unite in paying respect to the memory of those who fell, each of them giving his life for his duty as he saw it; and all should be as one in mourning the death of those men how to live usefully while the times call for the performance of the countless necessary duties of every-day life, and how to hold ourselves ready to die nobly should the nation ever again demand of her sons the ultimate proof of loyalty.

REMOVES LOWER JAW.

Strange Surgical Operation Performed at Seattle. Seattle, May 28.—The entire lower jaw was removed from Louis Usana, a cook, at the Seattle general hospital yesterday noon.

The operation, performed by Dr. F. B. Whiting, was made necessary from the fact that necrosis had set in, following the extraction of a tooth by a dentist, and the entire jaw was rotting.

Usana stood the operation well, but has ahead of him a long and tedious recovery. Eventually, physicians and surgeons agree, a hard substance resembling bone will granulate in and give Usana a jaw bone.

The operation made it necessary to resect bone until resembling in appearance the portion of the face. For the present Usana is neither able to eat nor speak. He will recover, as each as soon as the soft tissues, which are operation heal, but must be fed for some time in an artificial manner.

A number of prominent physicians witnessed the operation on Usana. Necrosis, necessitating the removal of the jaw, is an extremely rare case, and the interest of the medical profession in the case is general. The operation was entirely successful.

"SHAKES" THE BARON.

Another American Girl Tires of a Dirty Noble Husband.

Cleveland, O., May 28.—Another international marriage has turned out unhappily and another beautiful American girl, who wedded a title is now in the divorce court seeking release from the ties that have changed from love to hate.

Three years ago Charlotte Hart of Cleveland, accompanied by her parents, went abroad. In Vienna she met Baron Julius Takacs de Kin-Joka, a Hungarian nobleman. He fell in love with the beautiful American girl, Papa and Mamma Hart, sensible American parents, who were delighted and spirited the girl away. Baron Julius, in his hot-blooded Hungarian style, followed and after a pursuit extending over half of Europe, won his suit.

It was at Naples that Miss Hart eluded her parents and the pair were married. A few weeks ago the baroness arrived here and filed suit for divorce. She also asked to be declared a bankrupt. In her petition she decried her husband had compelled her to sign notes for $25,000 to pay for money he had borrowed to court her and buy her presents. She alleged that the transaction was illegal and she wanted to be released from the liability.

Baron Julius, etc., followed his beautiful wife here. He replied to the suit and his attorneys argued that Mrs. Jules by her marriage forfeited her American citizenship and became a subject of Hungary.

Baron Julius is a good looking chap. He lives at an expensive hotel, says he loves his wife, that she loves him and that her parents alone keep her away.

Feuding the trial of the case the baron has become a baseball fan and is enjoying himself hugely.

Indications That the Japanese Intend to Overwhelm Port Arthur by a Sacrificial Campaign—Japanese Will Content Themselves by Establishing Their Frontier at Mukden—Kuropatkin Does Not Disguise His Surprise at the Great Strategic Skill of His Adversaries Thus Far.
