UNDERMINING FREEDOM.

Secretary of War Taft. In an address before the Harvard law school alumni association, said last night that the declaration of independence does not mean what it says, when it declares that all government is based upon the consent of the governed.

He defies the immortal document upon which this government stands, seeks an excuse for oppression by misconstruing a self-evident doctrine which all the enlightened nations have taken as their keynote, and justifies the policy of holding subject races by saying the patriots who wrote the declaration of independence did not mean what they said.

The doctrine promulgated by Taft is dangerous doctrine to teach young Americans entering a professional career. They will imbibe a disrespect for the stability of American institutions from such doctrine taught by men in such positions. They will conclude that if one American principle can be set aside for political capital and mercenary gain, that all of those principles can be subjected to the same sacrilegious treatment that nothing is sacred in popular government and nothing is safe from the touch of the despoiler.

Is it any wonder that anarchy is on the increase among the poor, vicious and ignorant, where the sacred principles of freedom are ruthlessly set aside by the highest officials in the land? Is it any wonder that the chasm between the helpless and the powerful grows wider and wider and that oppression of the people by the monster syndicates grows apace, where the custodians of the people's rights thus seek to excuse willful disregard of the fundamental principles of the government by such fallacies?

Taft is scattering seed of disruption among the American people by such doctrine. He justifies a "bolt" from American principles and "if the law students to whom he lectured in this strain follow out his teaching, they will become aristocratic anarchists, despising and scoffing at the principles for which the patriots willingly surrendered their lives on the altar of freedom.

If one principle in the declaration of independence can be thus assailed. It is all an empty array of words. If one of the basic doctrines of liberty can be thus subverted to the lusts of plutocratic government, none of them are safe from violation.

Taft has made a mistake. His zeal for the success of his party has driven him to this extreme sentiment which the American people will resent. Nothing is more sacred to an American than the guarantee of his liberties and he will resent any attack upon them as if it were aimed at his family and household.

GUARD PENDELTON HOMES.

The Portland papers some time ago exposed a plan of funds in human form to collect hundreds of young girls throughout the West for purposes of shame at the St. Louis and Lewis and Clark fairs.

At the time, this exposition of horrible facts was thought to be a bit of "yellow" journalism, and was lightly passed by.

That such a plot does exist, and that active agents are now at work in the cities of the Northwest, with this nefarious purpose in view, is now known to be true. Within the last week, two brazen devils, in the shape of women, from Portland, have visited this city and it is positively known that they solicited young girls of Pendleton, to engage, at some future time in dance halls and beer joints in St. Louis, and also in Portland.

Can anything be more horrifying to mothers than this thought? Can anything be more arousing the righteous indignation of a city than to think that such funds are being sheltered?

Such vipers should be hunted down and shot without ceremony. Such debased criminals should receive no mercy at the hands of courts nor juries. In spite of all the loving care bestowed upon children, in spite of all the sacred safeguards thrown around the family altar, and in spite of all the heart-breaking toil and pains in rearing daughters in decency and honor, yet these murderous vipers creep into homes, unawares.

The associations of young daughters cannot be too closely scrutinized. The vigilance of the household can-

THE DEMOCRATIC OUTLOOK.

The Lewiston Tribune, an independent, conservative and influential paper, and one of the closest students of current politics in the entire Northwest, in speaking of the democratic outlook this year, says:

"The factional and fratricidal fights in the democratic party lead most people to think there is no chance for the party this year, and the approaching convention at St. Louis is therefore looked upon more with curiosity than as the deliberations of the great historical party of this country having as its object the adoption of a living creed and the selection of a national ticket designed to be more in sympathy with the ruling purposes of the people than those of the opposition party.

"While at this time there is nothing to greatly encourage the hope of success, it is well also to understand that under any circumstances the minority has tremendous odds to face that can scarcely be overcome until there is a general revision against the governing party.

"To begin with, most of the states are inorganically wedded to one or another of the political parties, like New England, the Northwest, Pennsylvania, etc., to the republican party and the southern states to the democratic party, leaving a very few that are the real battleground in the contest.

"These doubtful states, or enough of them, are where the work is centered and where, on reflection, any one can see that the party in power can scarcely be dislodged. Under the present recent executive order, conferring pensions on all survivors of the civil war, the bureau is now working over time, at breakneck speed, distributing the treasury millions in New York, Indiana and Illinois.

"The other states, the solid states, are are out until these doubtful states have been safely fixed in time for the good work to be shown at the height of the campaign.

"It is now generally conceded that the president's timely use of the treasury has saved these states to the party.

"There are 600,000 officeholders in this country, outside of the army and navy departments and the public school system.

"Of these, say one-fifth, are democrats in the solidly democratic states that are not affected by campaigns. This makes an army of half a million paid and trained men at work for the party in power, with money, prestige and influence, while their opponents have nothing but their democratic creed to work with and plead for.

"So in the doubtful states it is up hill work at best. The power of place and patronage, when developed as they have been within the last few years in this country, are enough to swing the determining vote in close contests in the close states.

"Of course, such a vast power as is now centralized in the hands of the federal administration is subversive of republican institutions, especially when wielded by an erratic, impulsive and ambitious man with a meek and muzzled party behind him, but still there are enough free citizens left to determine elections whenever, as said, there is great dissatisfaction or revulsion against the governing power.

"Such revision may come at any time and may not come for an many years. It is even possible that the St. Louis convention may present something more acceptable to the people at large than the strenuous man, if elected, would be, with the glory of election to inspire and assure him, relieved of all restraints and with fresh sensations to create and more records to break.

"There yet may be a way of presenting to the people the main ground, and apparently the only ground, upon which to defeat the nominee, and all the desperate plunging, courting of dangers, military heroics, insular sensations and the feverish stress and strain the next few years may witness but the outlook is good and besides there are too many people who like that sort of thing as long as the gage is not picked up and the costly penalties have not yet been brought home."

WHAT IS DEMOCRACY.

Pendleton, June 30.—Orators will soon thunder forth that great slogan of democracy, "A government of the people, by the people, and for the people," on Fourth of July platforms throughout the country.

But have we a government by the people? A government is democratic in the proportion that it responds to the will of the people. Is our responsive?

If it were, two attempts to make our constitution democratic would have been successful. First in the senate—to lessen the term and elect by direct vote. Second—for direct vote for president.

Any one, to understand a constitution, should understand the purpose for which it was adopted. When we understand this we will find that our constitution is not democratic.

The constitution embodies the dominant views of the eighteenth century. It is the instrument through which we are trying to reach a democracy a good one? The evidence of the Philadelphia convention shows that the aim of the fathers was not to secure democracy, but less. They did not believe in the people. It does not follow that these men were not public spirited. They represented the conservative business men, those of property, and had little sympathy with "no new ideas of popular rule."

Some members of this convention were earnest in the cause of liberty. All the prominent democratic leaders were absent except Franklin, who was in his dotage.

The cheerful kicker is a more useful citizen than the resigned saint who suffers injustices to be heaped upon him. Kicking is no crime if you kick hard enough at the right time.

CENTURIES OLD

The disease which has brought more suffering, degradation and disgrace upon the human race is the same to-day that it was centuries ago. It is called Contagious Blood Poison, "The Bad Disease," and is given other names, but among all nations is regarded as the blackest and vilest of all human diseases. It goes from bad to worse; the little sores that first appear are soon followed by others; the glands of the neck swell and inflame, a doctor and surgeon, though I took their treatment most faithfully. In fact, I seemed to grow worse body, the mouth and throat were so sore that I could not utter a word. My eyes became ulcerated, the hair and nails fell out, my eyes-brows drop out, and ugly yellow blotches make their appearance, and if the disease does not check at this stage, every bone, muscle, tissue and nerve in the body becomes infected with the poison, and from the roots of the hair to the soles of the feet there is not a sound spot anywhere.

To cure this awful contagion the blood must first be purified, and nothing will do this so quickly and surely as S. S. S., which has been known for years as an antidote for the poisonous virus of Contagious Blood Poison. Mercury and potash may check it for a time, but it comes back in a still more aggravated form. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable, and is offered for proof that it contains a mineral ingredient. Write for our home-treatment book, and learn all about Contagious Blood Poison and how to treat it. No charge for medical advice.
