I am not discouraged; things will right themselves. A pendulum swings one way and then another, but the steady pull of gravitation is toward the center of the earth. Any structure must be plumb if it is to endure. So it is with nations. Wrong may seem to triumph; right may seem to be defeated; but the gravitation is upward to the throne of God. Any political institution, if it is to endure, must be plumb with the line of justice. —Last words of John P. Altgeld.

WHOLESMOME INDEPENDENCE.

"Wholesome independence" is what the New York Commercial correctly characterizes the flopping in the political ranks this year. From an election for dog catcher in Pendleton, to the selection of a president, independence in politics is commendable. It shows individual thought and repugnance to "bossism." It shows personal interest in public affairs and selection of candidates from voluntary consideration, rather than from the crack of the leader's whip.

That so many influential men are changing from their time-worn ruts this fall, will give courage to many men in the common walks, who have been faltering between decisions.

The flopping of one man like William G. Choate, from the republican to the democratic ranks, because of a principle involved, will give courage and reason to thousands of men who are in search of a right decision.

The flopping of John S. McCall, lifelong, influential democrat to the Roosevelt rank, will mean thousands of democratic votes for Roosevelt, as a consequence.

Summing up the situation, after a long dissertation on the merits of candidates and parties, the Commercial says:

"In the present campaign no one question dominates all the rest, as was the case eight and four years ago. The action of influential republicans and democrats in this severing former political ties is a wholesome sign."

"It shows the existence of a spirit of political independence that cannot fail to have a restraining and moderating effect upon both of the great political parties—particularly in the instance of men like Mr. McCall and Mr. Choate—men of affairs, who have nothing to do with machine politics and who are actuated by simple regard for the public good."

The spectacle of savage ferocity, goaded by the higher ideals of patriotism, now exhibited in the trenches before Fort Arthur and Liao Yang, will probably not be witnessed in the world again, if the civilizing influences continue to spread. In all the history of modern wars there has not been seen the same frenzied disregard for death in hand to hand encounters, in hopeless charges, in decimating cannonading, in savage sorties in which entire regiments are mowed down, as that now witnessed in the Russo-Japanese war. The old barbarism of the nations, still brims in each, while above it, and adding fuel to its frenzy, is a struggling civilized ideal of patriotism, which is as fearless of death and more cunning to direct its slaughters. When this war is over and that vexed Eastern question is settled satisfactorily to the powers, the last great international battle ground and bone of contention will have been removed and it is hoped that by that time, both Slav and Jap will have advanced beyond the stage of savagery that makes the present struggle horrible.

Who does not sympathize with the oppressed Irish people, in their struggle for homes, self-rule and freedom? That splendid isle and its splendid race have furnished millions in revenue for the English government, and yet little of it has been spent in improving Ireland. The peasantry has enriched the landlords and yet all the wealth they have created has been sent out of Ireland to garrison British castles and fight the Irish cause, while the toilers have dwelt in shanties and their children have grown up in ignorance. American hearts beat warm for the Irish race. American money will be subscribed by the thousands of dollars for that worthy cause for which Redmond and other Irish leaders are now visiting this country. With all her glorious achievements in other fields, the oppression of Ireland will always remain an overshadowing crime in English history.

The inland Empire will not quibble about who shall build the portage road. It makes no difference to them who secures the contract or who superintends the work, so it is done in a skillful, able manner. The completed road is the goal sought. The open

DEATH TO UNIONISM.

The butchers' strike has resolved itself into a death struggle between unionism and its haters, the Employers' Association, headed by Parry, the arch-enemy of the union.

At this time, 50,000 union employees of the packing houses are idle, and cannot get their old places back. On September 1, 20,000 union employees of the Pullman car company will be thrown out of employment by the closing of the factories, and the International Implement company, employing about 20,000 people, all organized, threatens to close down about September 1.

Notice has been given that employees securing positions in any of these institutions, at the resumption of work, will be selected from those recommended by and applying through the Employers' Association, the enemy and opponent of the unions.

This means further trouble. Not one union man will apply for his old position through the medium of his most hated enemy. The employer will hire no one except he come through this association. So the prospect darkens.

Chicago is the head and front of unionism in the United States. There, all the great labor organizations center and have their chief source, and the efforts of the Manufacturers' Association and the Employers' Association will be directed with fury against the Chicago stronghold.

The public will suffer more than either of the combatants. The rich employers can well afford to be idle for they have sufficient wealth to satisfy any reasonable man. The laboring people will be thrown on the charity of the public and will sap the strength from other cities in contributions to support the siege.

How to avoid this impending struggle, no matter which way it is settled, is one of the problems now before the peace-makers and the statesmen of the United States.

It is the most ominous shadow in the present political campaign.

SKIN DISEASES

I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape. It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off. You can imagine how offensive it was. For two years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and pain, and in the day it was a case of shame. I had tried all the remedies, but I had no relief. I was almost blind. I was almost deaf. I was almost dumb. I was almost dead. I was almost everything. I was almost nothing. I was almost all that is bad. I was almost all that is good. I was almost all that is in between. I was almost all that is in the world. I was almost all that is in the sky. I was almost all that is in the earth. I was almost all that is in the water. I was almost all that is in the air. I was almost all that is in the fire. I was almost all that is in the sun. I was almost all that is in the moon. I was almost all that is in the stars. I was almost all that is in the planets. I was almost all that is in the universe. I was almost all that is in the world. I was almost all that is in the sky. I was almost all that is in the earth. I was almost all that is in the water. I was almost all that is in the air. I was almost all that is in the fire. I was almost all that is in the sun. I was almost all that is in the moon. I was almost all that is in the stars. I was almost all that is in the planets. I was almost all that is in the universe.

Send for our book on the skin and its diseases, which is mailed free. Our physicians will cheerfully advise you without charge any who write us about their case.

Oregon Feed Yard

Corner Webb and Cosbie Streets.

The old reliable Oregon Feed Yard is not only centrally located, being only three blocks from Main street, but it is the largest and best equipped in the city. We have well water and city water, with hose to wash your rigs. We have plenty of shed room and corrals for loose stock. There is plenty of room for a six or eight-horse team to turn around inside the feed yard. We can give you grain hay either green or ripe, and though the price of feed is higher, you will find that we have not raised the price, but the old schedule of prices is maintained.

Looks Like Coal "Blossom."

W. N. Brown brought in some specimens from the Snippton country Monday which bear a striking resemblance to coal or, more properly speaking, to have been taken from a formation in which coal might be expected to occur. The specimens left at this office are very light and soft and can be cut readily with a pocket knife. When freshly cut it resembles coal somewhat but as the surface dries the resemblance is less marked. A sample has been sent away to be tested in order to determine whether or not the discovery indicates anything of value in the mineral line in that locality.—Cotton Globe.

Umattilla Heroine Teacher.

Miss Retia Andrews of Dale, visited several days in town the fore part of the week. Miss Andrews has secured the winter's term of school at the red school house on Stewart creek, south of Pilot Rock, and will soon leave for her new field of labor. Miss Andrews is the young woman who rode 75 miles on horseback last February through a blinding snowstorm to attend the teachers' examination at Pendleton.—Long Creek Ranger.

Loss Logs in Forest Fire.

In the forest fires which prevailed some weeks ago east of Whitney the lumber company lost something like a half million feet of logs, the actual cash loss of which will exceed $300,000. There are still several small fires burning over in that part of the country, but the settlers and lumber people are fighting them, with a good prospect of gaining control.—Baker Democrat.

Big Horse Shipment.

Henry Gartner yesterday purchased a horse which he has sold to C. N. Clay and which will be shipped to East St. Louis, Ill., on September 2, and the train carrying the shipment will be composed of about 16 cars. The horses are for general use in the East.—Baker City Democrat.
