> wagon roads could be constructed only at great expense. The Mountain Gem boat has been built especially for this run, drawing little more than 20 inches, and her burden being but 469 tons. To propel this light craft, a steam plant far stronger than the average has been out aboard. The boiler is 221/4 feet long by 61 inches in diameter, and there are two engines of 11-inch diameter and six-foot stroke. Navigators of the upper river believe that this equipment will drive the Mountain gem against the strongest Snake
