CITY RESERVOIR BUILT AT ADAMS

NEW WATER SYSTEM WILL SOON BE COMPLETE.
Engineer Miller, who had charge of Pendleton Sewer Surveys is putting in the Reservoir and Water System—Over $7000 Will Be Expended for the Water Supply—Will Be Complete by December.

Between 25 and 30 men are actively engaged at laying the 6-inch main for the new Adams water works. This main extends from W. T. Wallen's place two and one-fourth miles northwest of town, to the reservoir adjoining town, and the system will be in operation sometime during the coming December. The main is laid at an average depth of five feet.

The well from which the water is drawn is 30 feet in diameter and 20 feet in depth, and the water supply is of the very finest and in all probability is inexhaustible. The gravity system is used throughout, the peculiar lay of the land where the well is located making an engine unnecessary there, and there is an abundant fall from the reservoir into town.

The reservoir, which is concrete, is 50 feet in diameter and 19 feet in depth.

The entire population of Adams subscribe to the patronage of the system, which is expected to be in every respect as perfect as that of any town in the state, large or small.

When the city undertook this enterprise it had $2000 cash on hand, to which it added $5000 by a bond issue.

Miller, who put in the enlarged Pendleton system, is the engineer.

Big Buck Sales.
J. E. Smith Livestock Company Can Not Meet the Demand for Blooded Sheep.

THE SHEEP OUTLOOK

J. E. SMITH CANNOT SUPPLY DEMAND FOR BUCKS.

Large Shipments and Good Prices This Year Have Placed Umatilla County Sheepmen in an Envious Position—Large Increase Last Spring, Which Was Practically All Saved—Sales Have Been Unusually Large This Season—Wool Prices Satisfactory.

When asked about the present status and next year's prospects for the sheepmen, J. E. Smith, of the J. E. Smith Livestock Co., smiled a satisfied smile and opened the subject in reply by saying that he has letter and personal advices from Shanahan, Antelope, Baker county and Morrow county to the effect that practically all the young sheep are bought up and gone, and that buyers from distant markets are on hand as numerous as at any time during the buying season, and more on the way.

Asked about how many sheep will be left in the county this fall when buying closes, Mr. Smith stated as his belief that there will be as many sheep on hand to be fed this winter as last, in spite of the enormous sales that have been effected and more to be made and being negotiated. He reminded his inquirer that the lamb crop last spring was not only very large, but that the loss of lambs was very, very small in proportion, and from these conditions and from observation he is sure that the sales have not been in excess of the natural increase.

Speaking of the relative values of wool and mutton sheep at this time, Mr. Smith expressed the opinion that a balance is about to be struck—in fact, will work itself out during the next year or two—which will establish higher prices for stock sheep. This will be the natural result of the appreciating price of wool, which two years ago averaged 12 cents, last year was 13 cents for the same grade, and 14 cents this year.

From these premises, including the unsatisfied and unsatisfied demand from outsiders for Umatilla sheep, Mr. Smith believes that by September of next year the average good yearling ewes will bring $3 per head from outside buyers and from everybody else who wants to buy them. He added: "Remember that only three and four years ago they were worth that figure and wool not nearly so high then as now."

"Furthermore," added Mr. Smith, "I venture the confident prediction that the same grade of wool that brought 14 cents last spring will next spring bring 15 cents."

In general terms, Mr. Smith expresses considerable optimism about the present situation as having bearings upon next year and the year thereafter, and it must be remembered that Mr. Smith is a conservative—usually given to being reserved to the point of reticence. He says:

"The prospects for next year are really extra good, especially for the clip. This fall the pasturage is as fine as the very best fall pasturage ever has been, and good hay is abundant and cheap. The sheep will start into the winter proper in fine flesh and usually in perfect health. In fact, there is every indication, as shown by indications possibly can have value this clip next spring, for a splendid clip next spring, both in quantity and quality."

MISS WHITEMORE MARRIED
Well Known Whistler Weds a Law Student in San Francisco.

Miss Gertrude Whittemore, formerly of this city, has been married for the past six months and her relatives and friends in Pendleton have just learned of the fact. Her husband is Winn Davidson, a prominent young San Francisco law student.

Mrs. Davidson was prominent in Pendleton social circles and was celebrated in the Inland Empire as a whistler. She has been living in San Francisco for the past year, where she went to study medicine. It was there that she first met Mr. Davidson.

A sister of Mrs. Davidson, in explanation of her sister's reticence in announcing her marriage, said: "She knew that our family were not favorable to her marrying Mr. Davidson. He visited here for a few weeks a year ago. My sister has not been home since the wedding."

WAS CRUSHED TO DEATH.
Coroner T. M. Henderson Held Inquest Over Remains of Sannet Page.

Coroner T. M. Henderson returned Sunday morning from near Wallula where he held an inquest over the body of Samuel Page, who was run over by a wagon. The body was buried seven miles this side of Wallula, just inside the Oregon line.

"Page was hauling water for a harvesting crew," said Dr. Henderson. "He had evidently been walking beside his wagon and attempted to mount it without stopping the team. The wagon wheels passed over the body between the shoulders and hips, crushing him to death."

"The four-horse team wandered on and finally in making a turn one of the wheel animals was thrown and strangled to death."

Page was 41 years of age and had no relatives in this part of the country. His death occurred about 6 o'clock Thursday evening.

Dickson, William S. Shuster, J. J. Kelly and E. W. Davis.

UMATILLA WILL BE ADVERTISELI

JOHN E. LATHROP WILL COLLECT NECESSARY DATA.

Pendleton and Umatilla County Will Receive First-class Advertisement Among Thousands of Eastern Home-seekers Through Enterprising Portland Paper—Illustrations and Special Articles Will Make Up the Edition—Mr. Lathrop, Who Was for 10 Years Editor of the East-Oregonian, Notes Many Improvements.

John E. Lathrop, for 10 years editor of the East-Oregonian, one of the first editors of the Oregon Daily Journal, and founder of the "Northwest," an illustrated monthly magazine, published at Portland, arrived in the city this morning to prepare descriptive matter for an illustrated write-up of Pendleton and vicinity, for the Oregon Daily Journal.

Mr. Lathrop has been appointed field correspondent of the Journal and will travel throughout the state and prepare a series of descriptive articles setting forth the resources of the different localities and the attractions offered to people in the East who are looking towards the West with a view to making homes here.

The articles will be illustrated with finely made and perfectly printed half-tones, the Journal now being equipped with the most complete engraving plant in the Northwest in addition to its other features of modern metropolitan press.

In view of the contemplated action of the county court to appropriate a sum of money to exploit the advantages of this county, in accordance with a statute authorizing such appropriation, the Journal hopes to aid in the work and to find the people of Pendleton ready to co-operate in the preparation of articles comprehensively covering this county.

Mr. Lathrop has traveled quite generally over the state during the past two and a half years, since leaving Pendleton, and finds that practically every locality is turning attention to this class of advertising, results attained being of material benefit to the commonwealth in the bringing of homeseekers and the wider scattering of information among the homeseeking classes of the East.

"One who lived for 15 years in Pendleton," said Mr. Lathrop, "cannot fail to retain his feeling of pride in the high reputation the town has for wide-awake action. In fact, he finds that Pendleton classes as the best town in the state outside of Portland. When population is taken into account, even Portland must move to the second place. You people who have been here continuously do not appreciate what significant changes have occurred during the past few years. The former resident is compelled to look for landmarks to convince himself that he is in Pendleton, and not in some place with which he is not so familiar. The construction of all these substantial business houses, in view of the well known conservatism and lack of booming that have marked Pendleton in the past, are indubitable evidence that the country surrounding has developed rapidly, while the number of handsome dwellings that have gone up are proof that the people here are prosperous."

"However, although progress has marked this region and in fact every portion of the state, it is apparent that the era of forward movement has only begun. Oregon, heretofore more or less stagnant, has stepped to the front and is now the center of interest among the million of Easterners who, crowded by what the economist calls pressure of population, are looking for locations where lands are cheaper and markets relatively are better. Oregon, possessing vast resources that have been only explored up to this time, is assured a future so far beyond the horizon of the present that the Oregon of a decade hence will be as strange to the occasional visitor of today as the Pendleton of today is the returning resident of a few years ago."

"The future of this region is bright with promise, the blood of the erstwhile ultra-conservative Oregonians is stirring with hope, and the world is turning to this state as it has turned to other states in the past. Every other Western state has had its forward movement. Now comes Oregon's."

"It is a rare privilege to travel through the cities of the state and witness the evidences of vigor where once was lassitude, enterprise where once was inertia, and progress where for decades matters have been at a standstill."

"Eastern Oregon, with its magnificent resources and the marvelous results already attained during the past generation, has larger industrial victories yet to win. Up here, you can find a fortune in the bracing air. There's a tonic in the simple act of alighting from a train. And, too, the busy scenes on the streets are proof-evidence that here are life and activity and all the constituent elements that go to make up an ideal modern municipality."

Mr. Lathrop is accompanied by his wife, and while in the city for the next few days, they will be guests of Hotel St. George. He is making arrangements to secure elaborate illustrations for the forthcoming write-up of Pendleton and vicinity, and will leave no detail incomplete in placing Pendleton properly before the inquiring homeseekers in the East through the medium of the Pendleton edition of the Journal.

KICKED IN THE FACE.
Fourteen-Year-Old Boy Dangerously Injured at Mountain Home.

The 14-year-old son of Joe Williams, of Mountain Home, 15 miles south of Pilot Rock, was a few days ago kicked by a horse squarely in the face. The boy was knocked insensible and lost such a quantity of blood that he was barely alive when brought to Pilot Rock and put under the joint care of Drs. Parker and Humes.

His nose was not only broken, but all the turbinated bones were broken into fragments, and the left cheek bone was crushed in. He also suffered from concussion of the brain somewhat, and for a time his life was despaired of. He rallied, however, and is recovering slowly.

GASOLINE POWER PLANT.
Will Be Used to Fill a Reservoir and Run a Farm Elevator.

Noah Brock, who has sold an irrigation plant to Jesse Hales, of Adams county, has just received the engine. Mr. Hales is busy installing now.

The motor is a three-horse power gasoline engine which feeds a reservoir which will furnish water for irrigating a garden and orchard for the livestock on the place, and for a complete system of water works for the farm. The engine will also furnish the power for elevating grain into the barn, for operating a churn, a wood saw and the family sewing machine.

Bowman Hotel to Be Furnished.
Purl Bowman is in Portland purchasing a complete outfit with which the second story of the new building will be equipped for lodging house purposes. The furnishings will include all the furniture necessary for an office, two parlors, and 42 bed rooms. From end to end all the furniture and carpets will be of the most serviceable and presentable materials and styles, and Mr. Bowman will expend between $200 and $300 upon the furnishings for the one floor.

There is no present intention of furnishing the third story, or of erecting a cafe in the buildings, though it is surmised that these further extensions of improvements will follow somewhat later.

The Bowman lodging house will be the largest in the state outside of Portland, beyond a question, and its equipment upon such a scale is an index of the kind and quality of the faith which local moneyed interests have in the future of Pendleton.

Farmers' Phone Line.
The farmers' independent telephone line was completed into town this week, and 'phones installed in several of the business houses. The instruments are first-class and are nicely finished.

This line has been in successful operation among the farmers in the vicinity of Haines and Rock Creek for some time, and now that it is connected with the town will prove a greater convenience. There are now about 30 subscribers and when the line is completed it is thought the number will exceed 40.—Haines Record.
