A WOMAN'S DEPART.

Below are the first few lines of text from the document:

"...women that they did...

There is another class of not, distress -- who, really...

Nature punishes..."

The text continues with various paragraphs discussing topics such as women's rights, politics, and society, including references to "mistresses", "women's rights", and "women's issues".

The document appears to be a newspaper or magazine article from the late 19th or early 20th century, discussing contemporary social and political issues from a female perspective.
