Bits by the Way. BY MADALENE CLARKS.

Every one should be blessed with a the bits by the way. Cousin John. Every "respectable family" should occasionally speak of Cousin John. After giving my opinion, all unasked, concerning this cousinship, Cousin John. After giving my opinion, all unasked, concerning this cousinship, I will proceed to say that I, myself, have really a Cousin John, a good sort of a creature, aithough the whole four generations demonstrated all kinds of recklessness by "John," ever since there was such an individual. He is a generous-hearted person, everybody appeals to him for sympathy, from the mayor down to the chimney-sweep, and always obtains it. He had a cheerful word for every one. And yet he was a heedless, lawless, forgetful tellow. All the relations are suffrage has undoubtedly "Loss on behalf of Woman Suffrage lated to the Republicans, we appealed to the Republicans, we appealed to the Republicans, we appealed to the Republicans party of Massachusetts to give us a Woman Suffrage platform and a Woman Suffrage candidate.

The Republicans Stafe Convention has responded by giving us a non-committal but not unfriendly resolution in the platform, and a candidate who is not publicly committed either in our favor or against us, but whose private views upon the subject we have not yet been able to ascertain.

When a woman begins to count thirty in years, she must expect to make herself a convenience, if she happens to remain in possession of her own cognome. That is the reason I felt myself bound to accede to John's request. I had become accustomed to being the "odd number," and had shouldered all the duties of the position a number of years; placed myself in the way when I might be useful, crept quietly out when I discovered my room would be more I discovered my room would be more blank. I considered temper a common frailty until I had made an especial note of this.

John was the best of husbands for a time—that was natural. But his careless ways overcame his tender care at last, and Mrs. John was perplexed. He invariably forgot to bring home any article for which she had asked, and was indispensable—Mrs. John was a prudent wife—to the household, or was oblivious to the fact that he had promised to leave an order at the market, until MEMORIAL OF THE MASSACHUSTERS. oblivious to the fact thanke had promised to leave an order at the market, until the dinner-hour. Really, he was quite apt to forget all about the dinner-hour, dine at the hotel with a friend, leaving Mrs. John and myself to weary with waiting, and then partake of a cold dinner with no appetite. He always came home happy, with a glib excuse, and one could never scold him.

W. Sheek, Esq., presented the following MEMORIAL OF THE MASSACHUSETTS WOMAN SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION.

To the Republican Party of Massachusetts—

The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association respectfully request the Republican party of Massachusetts, in State Convention assembled, to adopt a resolution affirming the right of women Class Bakery.

Mrs. John was somewhat astonished when I informed her one day that her husband was merely conducting himself in his natural manner, and that she must expect to endure it all her life. I also informed her that the relatives were watching her domestic management, especially of John. I fancied her rosy checks grew crimson, or else it was a reflection from the grate; but she said not one word. John came home at last, cheerful and overflowing with excuses, cheerful and overflowing with excuses, as usual. His wife smiled—very out of place I thought—and the matter seemed taxes.

Women pay taxes, med should have a voice in the amount and expenditure of taxes.

Next day Mrs. John was singing like voice in their enactment. Acxt day Mrs. John was singing like a bird, busy with her music, happy with her flowers. I gently hinted that the mountide might not be so far off as she individual rights and personal liberty.

John was out shopping, and didn't come suffrage for men and women.

The resolution was referred accord-Mrs. Ames, because they were going up to the island at one o'clock, and she really didn't think it would pay to run home and get out of breath. She forgot to mend John's stockings, and never the world to warm his climeter.
