The New Northwest.

FRIDAY.

No Ring.

What is it that doth spoil the meandering
With which her body she would dignify
When from her bed she rises in the morning,
To comb and plait and tie
Her hair with ribbon more or less costly?

What is it that her pleasure dispossess
When she would sit and sing the sun away—
Making her see dead roses in red roses,
And in the dewfall sing
A blight that seems the world to overlay?

What is it makes the trembling look of trouble
About her mouth and eyelids fair?
Ah me! ah me! she feels her heart beat double,
Without the mother's pangs,
And her wild fears are more than she can bear.

To the poor eighteen lark new powers are given
To [illegible] with the oldest song to sing,
But still to make her wavering way toward heaven
With undiscerning wing;—
But what to Him doth her sick sorrow bring?

Her days she turns and yet keeps overturning,
And her flesh shrinks as if she felt the rod;
For patient her will she thinks hard things concerning
The everlasting God,
And longs to be luxuriate like the clod.

Sweet heaven, be pitiful! Let [illegible] upon her
The saintly charities ordained by Rule;
She was so poor in everything save honor,
And she loved much—loved much!
Would, Lord, she had thy garments' hem to touch!

Haply, it was the hungry heart within her,
The woman's hunger, denied its natural right,
That made of her the thing men call a sinner,
Even in her own despite;
Lord, that her Judges might receive their sight!

Idea! Housekeeping.

BY AUGUSTA LARNED.

"You don't tell me, Sylvia, that she finds time to draw and paint?"

"Of course I do. If you should go into her pretty parlor, and look at the lovely little bits that beam out of the wall, all sketched by her own hands, you would imagine yourself caught in the studio of an artist, and a very good artist, too. Then, on looking around (the room is large, almost as large as her heart), you would perceive a piano and melodeon, perhaps a flute and guitar, with books and sheet-music; and you would begin to think you had strayed into the very court of the Temple of Harmony. But there by the window is a sewing machine, one of Grover & Baker's, and there is a little boy's garment lying on the stand, and, near by, a great big motherly basket of work, all cut and basted. The table is covered with books—the best books. You will perhaps find a volume of Dante, or Goethe's Faust open, with a fresh rose-bud laid upon the page. Then the windows are bowery with plants and climbing vines. Deep, old-fashioned window-seats, full of verdure and fragrance. No window curtains are needed to exclude the sunshine and save the carpet of those green screens of growing things, with ivy drooping and festooning everywhere, great royal cactus, and stately oleanders, and glistening lemon trees; beautiful tall fuchias bending their proud necks; olivia, like a fine green wist just touched with frost; geraniums in flower, the healthiest you ever saw—make the prettiest window drapery in the world."

"What a fairy this Theodora must be," said my friend, as she sat absorbed, listening to my rapture.

"No, not a fairy, at all," I returned; "only a large-minded, admirable, modern woman, full of genius and inspiration, with the habits of industry and practical sense of our grandmothers."

"And you say, Sylvia, this wonderful creature does all her own work?"

"Every hand's turn of it. She has never had a servant in her house, except a few days along at the first, when people told her she must do as others do, and take an 'intimate enemy' into her kitchen. That single experience was sufficient. The dread of being obliged to live constantly with some one who might get intoxicated, or steal the spoons, or purloin pounds of tea and sugar for her relatives, or, worse still, give the baby 'drops' when she went out of an afternoon, was too much for her nerves. She determined to rid herself of the annoyance in the easiest way. So she dismissed Biddy—(let me see how many years ago; her oldest boy is ten; yes, nine years ago)—and has never admitted one of the same class into her house since. You see she could not bear to have the atmosphere of her rooms corrupted by the spirit which too often exists between employer and employed. In fact, she did not want to live under the same roof with a common, coarse sort of person, uncultured in thought and feeling, and ungovernable of tongue, who would perhaps give her back impudence for a civil request. Music and art and the best culture can only flourish in the genial companionship of love. She meant to make her life sweet and sound all through, not with a layer of haste, trickery and antagonism in the kitchen, and a layer of love, light and beauty in the parlor, but with one core of sympathy running clear through. She knew if she did her own housework she should have more labor for her hands, but infinite peace of spirit, and so it has proved. The experiment has continued long enough to be considered a thorough, practical test."

"But think, Sylvia, of all the drudgery connected with doing the work of a whole house. Hasn't it in all these years worn on her spirits, and taken some of the poetry and romance out of her, and made her a little more commonplace and like the rest of us than she used to be? Come, Sylvia, I must pick some flaw in your perfect chrysolite."

"I wish you could see her in her own home," I answered enthusiastically. "Here is what I call ideal housekeeping. There is no notion of drudgery connected with any of it in her mind, down even to the washing of pots and pans. It is all good, needful work. She is simply acting her part—not soliloquizing how well she is thinking about the comfort of her husband and children, and her thoughts embody themselves in deeds. This is the way the sun shines and the wind blows. When she bakes, she is not baking bread only, but a much finer product that might be named joyful cheer. The enjoyment of all the beautiful things by which she is surrounded, to any one I ever saw, is woven like gold and purple threads through the woof of her life.

"She never stops for recreation. She is recreating all the time. When she is making beds up stairs she is singing in her high, clear voice something from Mozart or Beethoven. There is music in her step as she moves overhead. She has set all the windows open, so as to enjoy the glimpses of woods and blue waters while her nimble fingers are busy. Below in the kitchen, there are plants blooming in pots, and pictures upon the wall, that she may have something to live in while she pares the family potatoes. Half an hour after the dinner dishes are washed she is touching the piano in the parlor to some sweet and tender strain of Weber and Chopin; or perhaps she has drawn out her brushes and is putting some strokes to a little picture on her easel—the bay that evening, perhaps, with a glow in the sky, and a luminous calm.

"In her busy life she has still been able to learn three or four languages. There will be a volume of the Italian poets lying upon her work-table. In a busy moment she picks it up, and all the day one of old Petrarch's love sonnets goes humming through her fancy. Then you ought to hear her talk such wit, such wisdom—such indications of insight flow from her lips. I have sometimes thought her the only live person I know. She is awake all over, and the best things of all kinds come to her as doves flock to the window."

"There, I am glad, Sylvia, you have [illegible] breathless, and long longing to ask you a question for the last half hour, and couldn't get a word in edgewise. I want to know what happened to Theodora when her children were all down with the measles. Did she go on singing and playing and reciting poetry the same as ever?"

"They never have had the measles," I answered triumphantly, "or any other children's disease. Their mother has brought them up so healthfully and naturally they have escaped all those pests. They are wonderfully intelligent. Theodora has taught them everything—not by rote, but through comprehension. They all sing and play on the harp. [illegible] Boutton & Tilden know; but they get their musical grounds from the Herr professor. I must leave him and the children until another time."

"Well, Lydia," said my little friend, withdrawing the end of her parasol from between her rosy lips, and eyeing me skeptically, "I believed it all until you came to the children's diseases. That was too much to swallow. You have made it all sounds like the impossible loves we read about, and I believe it is," and she walked away in the firm conviction that I had been hoaxing her, whereas it is every word true, and I am so glad it is.

A Restorative.

We really feel sorry that we should have aroused the ire of our respected friend of the Seattle Dispatch to such a degree that he has lost his usual good sense. We surely had no intention of making him literally turn himself inside out, as he has done in his column diatribe against us. We shall be careful hereafter not to compel him to [illegible] choice epithets as he applies to us—"liar," "rank with the fumes of tobacco and lager," "fat and greasy," "poor John," and kindred terms of endearment. If our respected friend had manifested one-half the aptitude in scurrility in his memorable passage at arms with Enoch G. Adams, it is possible he might not have come off so completely worsted in the encounter, nor have reminded his reader so impressively of Don Quixote's attack upon the windmill. For one of his age he certainly shows a talent for invective which will revive the hopes of those who fear that imbecility of age may deprive them of the use of this weapon. The most remarkable feature of the matter is, that Mr. Brown should persist in holding us responsible for the very acts and crimes of which he delights so much to boast. [illegible]

It is indeed marvelous to note the peculiar unction with which he rolls a sweet morsel of scandal under his tongue as he depicts himself the hero of many peccadilloes. What would Vinnie Ream and others say, if they only knew the subject of some of those romances? Then his intimate acquaintance with "Steve Douglas," and his associations with the eminent men of all ages and nations, should have taught him to curb his temper.

But we only set out to write an item which should, if possible, restore the friendship which has well nigh been interrupted (if Mr. Brown's article is an index to his deeper nature) by a playful allusion to his attempt to plead the "baby act," and make us responsible for the same acts for which Mrs. Dunlway demonstrated him a "case of pleasence." We are sure that upon second thought he will prefer to bottle his wrath for ministers of the Gospel and women, in preference to wasting it running a tilt with us, and so, as the immortal man remarked, we shall drop the subject.—Standard.

A Merited Punishment.

At the late term of the Circuit Court for Jackson Co. one Whipple from Crescent City, [illegible] before the Grand Jury and testified to the bad character of Miss Hannah Ralls, the alleged victim of Fay's lust and utter heartlessness. As has always been that in all such cases some wretch in human shape [illegible] who, for a price, would outrage decency, mock virtue and defy public opinion to the extent of bearing false witness against the injured and helpless. So it has not always been the case that punishment so swift and dire has been visited upon this class of lawbreakers. In this case, however, the vile evidence received a castigation most fit for his transgression. Miss Ralls and her sister, armed with a substantial rawhide each, walked into the hotel dining room where the reptile was seated at the table, and proceeded to shower upon him thick and fast such blows as made him writhe with agony, while his pitiful cries for mercy availed him naught, while the multitude shouted their approbation. Whipple's offense was a grevious one, and previously was he made to atone for it. For this timely chastisement [illegible] this vermin social outlaw and debased specimen of the genus homo, the Misses Ralls are entitled to the plaudits of many an honest soul throughout the land.

We hold that the path of no man is entitled to a feather's weight who will swear to commit crime with a female plaintiff in actions of the sort indicated above. [illegible] That all such averments are false; men who could truthfully testify in such cases are not the ones who volunteer as such witnesses; indeed it would be hard to coerce a man whose testimony would be worth a pea straw, into testifying in such cases. Hence it is generally safe to set those down who will give such [illegible] as corroborative evidence.—Mercury.

"I hold," remarks a physician "that thirty minutes should be spent at each meal, and spent too, in chewing the food a good portion of the time, and not in continued [illegible] and laughing; and in pleasant chat and laugh, instead of the continuance of the intense nervous pressure of the office or library. If you lay out to spend thirty minutes in this way at your meals, you may rest assured you will not eat too much, and what you do eat will be in the best condition for appropriation to the needs of your system."

The editor of the Germantown Telegraph has kept cabbages a dozen winters in perfect state, in the following manner: "Plant or set them up in rows as they grow, that is, with the roots down; fill in with soil pretty freely, then make a covering by planting two posts where there is not, allowing for a pitch to carry off the water; lay bean poles opposite the way of the way of the pitch and cover with corn fodder or straw or boards. In using through the winter, avoid as much as possible the sun side, and close up again."

THE ONE WEED REMEDY.

THE UNK WEED REMEDY,

—OR—

Oregon Rheumatic Cure.

HISTORY:

THIS REMEDY IS COMPOSED OF THE Active principle of the Unk Weed, Eng. [illegible] Grows most abundantly and perfectly in Washington county.

PROPERTIES, ETC.

It contains an Active and Volatile Principle, [illegible] by Fiber, and a bitter Tonic Principle.

MEDICAL PROPERTIES AND USE:

It is the most sure and speedy cure for Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout and Rheumatic Pains of all kinds that was ever introduced to the Materia Medica. The UNK WEED REMEDY, for it, in consequence of the existing bitter principle, possesses the necessary virtue of being a

Powerful Tonic,

Promoting the Appetite and invigorating the whole system. It [illegible] those suffering from [illegible] the system, where at the same time it [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] removing it from the circulation and system.

There are four remedies known to the Medical Profession which will remove the Rheumatic Poison from the blood, but whose action is so powerful in destroying the system of the already enfeebled Rheumatic patient, that their use has to be abandoned before specific effects are obtained; and hence the want of success in treating this prevalent and consequently [illegible] disease. The [illegible] of these medicines, already known, the UNK WEED REMEDY, although producing as active and as [illegible] effect on the blood and system in removing the Rheumatic Poison, also possesses a strong Tonic and Recuperating Element which adds to the [illegible] just so much [illegible] debilitated. Thus we have the combination for the first time of these two necessary elements in one remedy, which accounts for its superior and never-failing curative effects in Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout and Rheumatic Pains of all kinds.

The UNK WEED REMEDY is particularly APPLICABLE TO LADIES, in consequence of its Tonic qualities.

TESTIMONIALS:

We are aware of the fact that it is generally an easy matter to procure certificates attesting the efficacy of patent remedies from a certain class of those who use them. We have selected those for publication, the authority of whose statements are those of men of the most correct and scrupulous character, and because the large circle of their acquaintances in Oregon will not, for a moment, impugn or suspect them of any exaggeration in the statements they may make.

Certificate from the Deputy Jailer of Multnomah County Jail:

City Jail, Portland, Oregon, June 7, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: I was attacked with a severe case of rheumatism. It was in my thighs, hips, fingers, shoulder blade—indeed in the joints and muscles. I was attended by a regular physician, but with no effect. I was induced to try your Unk Weed Remedy, and it immediately cured me up. I consider it, from my experience, a [illegible] remedy for rheumatism.

LAURENCE TUTTLE, Deputy Jailer.

This is to certify that the above statement is correct to my own knowledge.

JOHN F. WARD, Jailor.

From California Book and Job Printing Office, 522 California street, San Francisco, June 1, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: For several years I have been subject to rheumatism in my right arm and shoulder, rendering me incapable to use it. The [illegible] of the attack some time since, I [illegible] of your Unk Weed Remedy, and the result was a perfect cure in a few days. I took only two bottles of it, and can truthfully say that I have not since had the [illegible] Unk Weed Remedy is a certain cure for rheumatism in all its forms, and I would heartily recommend all afflicted with that dreadful disease to try your "Rheumatic" and be cured.

JNO. H. McLANE.

Certificate of A. R. Shipley, Esq., special contributor to the "Willamette Farmer," and Secretary of the Oregon Horticultural Society:

Oswego, Oregon, March 28, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: I have been severely afflicted with rheumatism; in fact I was almost helpless. I sent to you for one bottle of the "Unk Weed Remedy," by the use of which I experienced almost immediate relief, and by the time the bottle was gone the rheumatism was no more. From my own experience, and from what I have heard others say who have used the Unk Weed, I believe it to be a certain cure for rheumatism.

Yours respectfully, A. R. SHIPLEY.

Certificate from Hon. A. J. Dufur, ex-President of the Oregon State Agricultural Society and author of "Statistics of Oregon:"

East Portland, April 1, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: I was afflicted with a severe attack of chronic rheumatism; was confined to my bed most of the time from January to [illegible] used the Unk Weed and it cured me up.

A. J. DUFUR.

Certificate from James Sykes, the celebrated [illegible] and "King of the Oregon Turf:"

Sauvie's Island, January 14, 1871.

Dr. Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: This is to acknowledge the effects of your Unk Weed Rheumatic Cure. I was afflicted for months with a very serious attack of inflammatory rheumatism, and tried nearly all of the so-called rheumatic remedies without any relief perceivable, then tried your Unk Weed Remedy, and was gratified in the most happy effects—a perfect cure. Truly yours,

JAMES SYKES.

Certificate from the well-known [illegible]

O. W. WEAVER, Esq.:

The Dalles, May 15, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: I have used the Unk Weed Remedy," and can cheerfully recommend it to persons afflicted with [illegible] rheumatism. It cured me of that disease. My hands, wrists, ankles—indeed, all my joints—were swollen and very painful.

O. W. WEAVER.

Certificate from Hon. Eli. H. Lane, Pilot Commissioner of Oregon, and a member of the City Council of East Portland:

East Portland, April 6, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: I have been afflicted with general rheumatism, with weakness in the back, and wandering rheumatic pains, accompanied by severe constipation. By the use of [illegible] bottle of your "Unk Weed Remedy," or Rheumatic Cure, I was relieved in a very short time, removing it from the circulation entirely relieved, and I cheerfully recommend it as a most valuable and effective remedy.

NAT. H. LANE.

Certificate from Hon. Gideon Tibbetts, a member of the City Council of East Portland:

East Portland, April 7, 1871.

Dr. A. M. Loryea & Co.: I have been afflicted with rheumatism for several years, and have used your "Unk Weed Remedy," and the result is a perfect cure. It regulates and invigorates the system. This is my experience with the [illegible]

Yours respectfully, E. L. QUIMBY.
