Says the Baker Democrat of the 18th: Yesterday evening, a little before dark, our attention was called to what appeared to be a volcano about thirteen miles west of this city, in the range of mountains on the west of Powder river from Mount Powder. This was not noticed before the earthquake of last Saturday evening.

Lands in Oregon within reasonable distance of water or railroad communication, says the Sacramento Union, have doubled in value within the last five years. Confidence is entertained that the market value of all such lands will steadily improve in the future. The fact that the Government domain is rapidly decreasing in extent of course renders it more and more difficult for seitlers to obtain available lands at first cost.
