Thus the bright history formed a marked and steep path with the headlong progress of the war, and I have always been trying to keep the memory of the two sides from war for the future. They were upon the home."