Under this head our worthy brother of the Oregonian, under date of July 14th, discourseth thusly:

We have heard of somebody saying that Sensior Carpenter and Ben. Butler, both law-yers of considerable eminence, had expressed the opinion that the amendments to the Constitution of the United States confer the right of suffrage on women; but we have never seen any such opinions by them, and shall not be easily convinced that they have given such. They are both understood to look favorably upon the proposition to extend to women the right to vate, and in this they have the concurrence of a very considerable number of prominent men of the country; but when we are told that they, or any lawyer of their class, have given an opinion that woman suffrage is altered the law of the land, we "demand the papers."

Our heart is gladdened. Whenever ing resolution: into an investigating mood, we have tives, That the right of suffrage is one of knows well that from the beginning of the common sense idea you give in your truly yours, gained one grand achievement in their the inalienable rights of citizens of the our journalistic career, we were in conpolitical education.
