CHAPTER XIII. Great was the gossip in fashionable that the heroine of our story, plain "Ellen Dowd, the Farmer's Wife," who, having risen by her own exertions from hers and wholly conquered?

In one of the most fashionable uptown residences, adjacent to the happy home of Ellen Dowd and Edgar Worth, a chatty, gossiping group of ladies were engaged in fashioning various articles of merchandise for a forthcoming fair for the benefit of one of the many char-Itable societies of the city.

"Mrs. Edgar Worth is late to-day," said a young lady who had become cles of "seam and gusset and band" in a garment that had been on hand in the society for months, and which the lady thus alluded to, as President and general overseer, had decided must "hang by the heels" no longer.
