A SABBATH GRAVE.

"A soldier of the Union mustered out"
Is the description on an unknown grave
At Newport News, beside the salt sea wave,
Name, regiment, date, only scanty record
Shot down in skirmish, or disastrous field
Of battle, when the front artillery drove
Its fiery storm through the ranks of brave
And death-defying rebels in the cloud!
Thou unknown boy, sleeping by the sea,
In thy neglected grave! with scant tears bless'd
I feel my pulses beat, my manhood's blood
When I remember how fast grave for me
All filled the better city that thy valor gained,
And Town give free nothing in return.
—[Longfellow.

Learning Her Value.

"Just what I have been expecting for about seven years," said Miss Pauline Worthington, looking from an open letter in her hand, with a frowning brow.

"Is it not your letter from Herbert, Lina?" questioned Mrs. Worthington, a tiny, silver-haired old lady with a gentle expression.

"Yes, mother. Essie is very ill with low, nervous fever, and they want me to come and stay until she is better. The carriage will be sent at three o'clock, mother," and Miss Pauline's eyes snapped. "I think it is about time Bert's tyranny was ended. He is killing her."

"Lina, he is your brother."

"I can see his faults if he is."

"I never heard Essie complain."

"She never would. But look at her. Nine years ago she was a living sunbeam, so bright and pretty. Now, pale, quiet and reserved, her voice is seldom heard, her smile seldom seen. A wintry shadow of her summer brightness! Now she has broken down. You have never seen her at home; but surely when she is here you see the change?"

"Yes, dear, she has changed; but family cares—"

"Has Louie changed so? She has been twelve years married."

Mrs. Worthington was silent. Louie was her eldest child, and presided over the home in which her mother had been a crippled prisoner for fifteen years. She took all the household care and had five children, and yet Louie had gained in beauty, and certainly in cheerful happiness, since her marriage, even if the merriment of girlhood was gone.

"Henry appreciates Louie," said Lina; "there lies the difference between her happiness and Essie's dejection. If there is any domestic trouble, Henry and Louie share it, while Herbert shifts it all upon Essie. He is an habitual fault-finder."

"Perhaps, dear, Essie is not so good a house-keeper as Louie. Herbert may have cause to find fault."

"Once in ten times he may. I never saw a faultless house or house-keeper; but Essie and her house are the nearest approach to perfection I ever did see."

"You never spoke so before, Lina."

"Because Louie and I thought it better not to worry you with a trouble beyond your help. But firmly believing, as I do now, that Herbert is actually worrying his wife into the grave, I intend to give him a lesson. That is, if you can spare me to go?"

"You must go, dear. I shall get along nicely."

So when Herbert Worthington sent his carriage, Lina was quite ready for the fourteen-mile drive to her brother's house. It was most unlike a house wherein any evil spirit of repining or fault-finding should have found an abode. Spacious, handsomely furnished, with well-trained servants, and all comforts wealth could furnish, it looked a very paradise on earth to visitors. But a very demon lurked there to poison all, and this demon Lina had come to exorcise.

For the first fortnight Essie took all her time and care, the gentle spirit hovering very near the portal of the eternal home. There was a babe, too, six months old, and its wants filled all the spare moments. Herbert married and fretted over domestic short-comings, but Lina peremptorily forbade all mention of these in the sick-room, having the doctor's authority for saying the patient's very life depended on quiet.

But when convalescence commenced, Lina sent Essie and the baby to visit old Mrs. Worthington, and took control of Herbert and the two older children and household, fully determined to show her brother how far he carried his habit of absurd fault-finding. With all her severity, she did believe he was himself unaware of the frequency of his querulous complaints and the exaggeration of his fretful statements.

The first dinner saw the beginning of the lesson Lina meant to teach, by practically illustrating some of Herbert's absurdities. Herbert entered the dining room, his handsome face disfigured by its habitual frown. Harry and Louie were seated, and the waiter-girl in her place behind Lina's chair.

"Soup," said Herbert, lifting the tureen cover; "perfect dish-water."

"Susan," said Lina, sharply, before Herbert could lift the ladle, "take that tureen to the kitchen and tell Jane the soup is not fit to eat."

Susan promptly obeyed. Herbert looked rather ruefully at the vanishing dish. He was especially fond of soup, and the savory fumes of the really delicious dish were tantalising. Essie would have made some gentle excuse—never whipped off his dinner in that way. All dinner time Lina kept up a ding-dong at Susan about the abominable soup, till Herbert heartily wished he had said nothing about it. But his imagination detected a burnt flavor in the pudding, and before he could remonstrate, that dish followed the soup.

"I'll get this house in some kind of order before I leave it," said Lina, emphatically.

"Before you leave it," said Herbert, sharply. "Do you suppose that you are a better house-keeper than Essie? Why, I have not a friend that does not envy me the exquisite order of my house and my dainty table."

"Herbert, you surprise me. Only yesterday I heard you say you did wish there was something fit to eat on the table."

"One don't expect every word to be taken literally," said Herbert, rather sulkily. But not an hour later, finding a streak of dust in the sitting-room, he declared emphatically that it was "not fit for a pig to live in."

Coming in the next morning, he found the curtains torn down, the carpets taken up, the floor littered with pails, soap and brushes, and Lina in a dismal dress, [illegible] up in a small heap, watching two women scrubbing vigorously.

"Good gracious, Lina," he cried, "what are you doing?"

"Cleaning this room."

"You said, Herbert, that Louie hadn't a decent stitch, and you wished somebody would see to her. So I bought her a complete outfit. I could not see any fault myself, but of course I got more expensive articles, as you did not like those already provided. I am glad you called attention to the poor, neglected child."

"Poor, neglected child!" echoed astonished Herbert. "Why, Lina, Essie fairly shares her life out over those children. I am sure I never see any better dressed, or neater."

Lina merely shrugged her shoulders. A month passed. Essie gained strength in the genial atmosphere surrounding Louie and her mother, while Lina ruled with a rod of iron. Herbert began to experience a sick longing for Essie's gentle presence. Lina took him so very literally in all he said, and yet he could not rebuke her for doing exactly what he openly wished.

A chair with a tiny spot of dirt being declared absolutely filthy, was upholstered at a cost of eight dollars. A dozen new shirts, Essie's last labor of love, being said to eat like meat-bags, she gave them to the gardener, and new ones were ordered from the furnishers. Harry's blocks were burned at the kitchen fire, when Herbert, stepping upon one, said he "would not have any such rubbish around the house." Every window was opened after a pettish declaration that it was as hot as an oven. An hour later, the stove was fired up to smothering heat, because he declared it "cold enough to freeze a polar bear."

In short, with an apparently energetic attempt to correct all short-comings and put the house-keeping upon a perfect basis, Lina, in one month, nearly doubled her brother's expenses, and drove him to the verge of distraction, keeping accurate account of every complaint.

But Essie was coming home, well and strong again. On the day of her expected arrival, Lina with a solemn face invited her brother into the sitting-room for a few moments of private conversation.

"Herbert," she said, very gravely, "I have a proposition to make to you. You are my only brother, and I need not tell you I love you very dearly. It has really grieved me to the heart to see how much there is to find fault with in your beautiful home."

Herbert twisted himself uneasily in his chair, but Lina continued:

"You know that mother is very dependent upon me, Louie having the children to care for, but I think she would sacrifice her own comforts for yours. So if you wish, Herbert, I will come here permanently to keep things in order for you."

Here Lina was obliged to pause and strangle a laugh at Herbert's expression of utter horror and dismay.

"You are very kind," he faltered, the instincts of a gentleman battling with the strong desire to tell Lina she would certainly drive him to a lunatic asylum by six months more of her model housekeeping.

"Not at all. A man who has made an unfortunate marriage certainly needs all the aid and sympathy his family can give him."

The last straw was laid upon the camel's back. Herbert spoke hotly:

"You are entirely mistaken, Lina! I have not made an unfortunate marriage. If ever a man was blessed with a wife, I am that man."

"You amaze me, Herbert," Lina cried, in well-feigned astonishment.

"I do not see why you should be surprised. Essie is gentle, loving, orderly, a gentle mother, and a perfect home angel—God bless her!"

"Herbert, is that true?"

"Certainly it is true."

"I cannot believe it!" was the slow response.

"Cannot believe it! Why?"

"Because"—and Lina dwelt impressively upon the word—"during the nine years of your married life, though visiting here frequently, I have never heard you speak one word of encouragement or praise to Essie. I never saw a touch of appreciation or commendation of any effort made for your comfort. Gentleness, and constant thought, have changed her from a happy, winsome girl to a pale, care-worn woman. Even her last illness was but the unspoken despair of a heart crushed under a load of daily censure and constant striving for the approbation never given. And you tell me you have never [illegible] her life or your home is a [illegible]."

The lady paused here, for she had thoughtful gravity for once weighed heavy on Herbert Worthington's heart. He spoke no word of self-defence as Lina slowly left the room. In the profound silence that followed, conscience reviewed the past, and he knew that his sister had spoken only the truth. The habit of fault-finding, meeting no resistance in Essie's gentleness, had gained in force, till all its unreasonable exactions revealed in the experience of the past months stood out in full view.

In the days when Essie lay dangerously ill, there had been no self-reproach like this in her husband's sorrow. He had given his wife a fair home, an ample income, frequent social pleasure, many costly gifts, and loved her faithfully while poisoning her whole life.

"God help me," he whispered, "to conquer this fault. Essie shall hear no more fault-finding, and if I see her drooping I will send her to mother and have Lina here to keep house."

Never had a wife and mother warmer welcome than greeted Essie. The children were unchecked in their loudest demonstrations of delight. But Lina had to rush into the hall to hide her merry eyes when Herbert, kissing Essie, said:

"We must let mother have Lina now, dear. She has been very kind, and has worked hard for my comfort; but there is no home fairy like my Essie."

The quick, glad look in his wife's soft eyes told Herbert one step had been taken in the right direction. As the days glided by, and Essie found appreciation meeting every effort to add to home comfort, a word of praise for every little triumph of cookery or needle-work, her pale face grew bright with happiness. Gradually the care-worn expression was obliterated by one of sweet content, and Herbert found his own heart lightened by the cheerful voice, the sunny smile, the bright eyes of Essie he had wooed years before.

And Lina, making a visit six months later, told her mother on her return:

"Herbert learned his lesson by heart, mother. He appreciates Essie now at her value, and lets her know it."—S. Annie Frost, in Hearth and Home.

A JUST RECOGNITION.—The Oakland Republican Convention which lately met in that city recognized the right of women to have a word to say about the education of their children, by nominating Mrs. Carr, wife of Professor Carr, late Professor of Agriculture of the State University, for the position of School Director. Is justice really to be done the sex at last? If so, it is well that the choice for a beginning in this needed reform should have fallen where it did, for Mrs. Carr is a woman of remarkable and versatile talent, and one of untiring energy in all needed reforms, and of great executive ability. She is a firm advocate of all measures that will advance the cause of woman. On this side of the bay we hope to see the new law recognized by the conventions, in the nomination of intelligent and energetic women for the position, for [illegible], for many reasons, they are eminently fitted.—Golden Dawn.

Mrs. Alice Cooley, who recently died at Brookfield, Mass., at the age of 100 years, was married on the first day of the present century, in the twenty-fifth year of her age, and went to her new home, where she resided till January 1st, 1875, a period of just 75 years, when she died. She was a lady of rare beauty and [illegible] of character.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!
STRONG AND PURE RICH BLOOD—DISEASE OF FLESH AND WEIGHT—CLEAR SKIN AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION SECURED TO ALL.
Dr. RADWAY'S
Sarsaparillian Resolvent
Has made the most astonishing cures; so quick and rapid are the changes the body undergoes, under the influence of this truly wonderful medicine, that Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER!
Every drop of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent communicates through the blood, sweat, urine, and other fluids and tissues of the system the vigor of life, for it repairs the waste of the body with new and sound material. Scrofula, Syphilis, Consumption, Glandular diseases, Ulcers in the Throat Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the ears, and the worst forms of Skin diseases, Eruptions, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt rheum, and painful diseases produced by Mercurials, Leaks of Sperm, and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of this wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any patient beyond a doubt either of these forms of disease its potent power to cure them.
If the patient, daily becoming reduced by the waste and decomposition that is continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these waste, and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood; and this the Sarsaparillian will and does most surely.
Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent excel all known remedial agents in the cure of chronic, scrofulous and constitutional skin diseases; but it is the only positive cure for Kidney and Bladder Complaints,

Tumors of 20 Years' Growth Cured by Radway's Resolvent.
BEVERLY, Mass., July 15, 1869.
DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried every thing that was recommended, but got no relief from me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it, but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I took six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief, and to-day I am not a sign of tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter, and happier than I have for 12 years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this to you for the benefit of others. You may publish it if you choose. HANNAH P. KNAPP.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well as entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—Boston Globe.

The extraordinary which this Magazine possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with it, it has not led the times, should cause its conductors no regret to write yesterday's record.—Hartford Courant.

Its untiring efforts to a great climb upon the public gratitude. The Magazine has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—Brooklyn Eagle.

SOLDIERS'
WAR CLAIM AGENCY,
No. 24 MONTGOMERY BLOCK,
San Francisco, Cal.

W. R. AIKEN, Attorney-at-Law, and Counselor in Claims against the U. S. Government, late Chief Clerk of the Grand Army of the Republic, in Claim Department, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers, discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on his doing. Information given free of charge. Write writing, enclose stamp for reply, and state company and regiment; and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under the Act of July 28, 1866, to January, 1876, so that all such claims must be made before that date. Every Deputy of this has been offered all volunteers who enlisted before July 22nd, 1861, for three years, if not paid the same when discharged. Land Warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the Indian Wars. Pensions for the late war and for 1812 obtained, and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensioners are allowed in Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted pensions to surviving veterans of Texas revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money in part, and Bounty paid. W. R. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business. 4-1-6m
