THAMES IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

One of the late mail packets of the company, which sets out at Charleston, was called into the harbor. It was a fine ship, with a large number of passengers on board, and was making wonderful progress through the swarms while she was passing through the harbor. The passengers were all fine-looking, and spoke English with a distinct accent. The ship was lying at anchor, taking on board provisions, and was expected to leave the harbor in a few hours. She was bound for New York, and was expected to arrive there on the 25th of the month.

The weather was fine, and the sun was shining brightly. The sea was calm, and the air was fresh and invigorating. The passengers were all in good spirits, and were enjoying themselves.

The ship was a fine one, with a large number of passengers on board. She was bound for New York, and was expected to arrive there on the 25th of the month.

The weather was fine, and the sun was shining brightly. The sea was calm, and the air was fresh and invigorating. The passengers were all in good spirits, and were enjoying themselves.

The ship was a fine one, with a large number of passengers on board. She was bound for New York, and was expected to arrive there on the 25th of the month.