But is not any in the world; women who, let me the same series also the prelude of the say, are fighting a moral battle for which they may be stigmatized now, but for which future generations of women will bless their memory as surely as the present generation bless the brave stand made by Luther of old, recalled and vividly reproduced the the brave stand made by Luther of old, or Garrison of late. Here, too, is being represented the historical experience of stoning the prophets and then building their sepulchers. From many tangible points, which may be made in favor of Woman Suf-frage, let us take this one involved in the speak. Thackeray says that there is no doubt Dickens' holiday stories in a mazing convivial-tion and real called and vividly reproduced the spirit of heartiness, of universal hilarity and hospitality and good feeling, which he appeals. Thackeray says that there is no doubt Dickens' holiday stories in a mazing convivial-tion and real-fellowship, and Irving's

As stated above, the total assessment of this city is, in round numbers, teu million doi-lars. Of this amount women are as-sessed for about one-tenth of the whole. Now, the practical question is this: Why are the nine millions politically represented while the one million is not? Why have the inte-tenths an active participation in making the laws and electing the officers who assess it, while electing the officers who assess it, while the one-tenth is wholly ignored ? Let us suppose that the owners of the The Puritan element in this country the one-tenth is wholly ignored? Let us suppose that the owners of the nine millions were approached with the proposition to abandon their political ginis, however, and wherever the es-rights and let a few men tax their prop-erty as they should see fit. Would not relies of the traditional day. But as the White Sal the proposal be rejected with indigna-tion? They would emphasize the un-reasonableness and strangeness of the idea. Now, what perplexes me is to un-derstand why the reasoning of the nine millions is not precisely as good for the one million; why the rights and du-ties of the latter are not just as urgent as those of the former. I should like to have some one give me a reason for the discrimination, a reason which does not honor that was paid to the day. dodge the moral law, common sense, and Republican principle. The usual reply is that woman has a proxy in her husband. But this is an awkwarl ex-planation. When she violates a law, she, not her husband, is held responsi-he. And what shell be seid of moments. As quoted above, in the county of Santa Clara are some fifteen hundred men voters who pay no tax save a poll tax; voters who pay no tax save a poll tax, and yet there, with no property inter-sits at stake, are indulged with a privi-lege denied to women who are assessed on three million doliars. How any man with a spark of justice in his breast can look upos this complacently, I do not understand. It is a plece of injus-ice no terms can describe. What deepens the injustice is the al-leged republicau character of our gov-strament. Were that government des-justly complain, because then the arbi-itarry will of one person, or of a privi-ered few, is the law. But our political
