A PROPER REBUKE. In a San Francisco letter to the Oregonian we find the following:

A terrible tragedy took place at the Brooklyn Hotel this week, being the death of a school teacher named Lydia Barnum, from the effects | the interior: of medicine administered to procure abortion. The details are so revolting that I must be excused from repeating them here. But little McCarter and sons, doubt can be had that her seducer was the man Ivory, whose name, written on an envelope beside the dead girl's body, was the only clue to strangers. The doctor (so-called) who attended her, cannot be proven to have prescribed for how the stern Spartan justice of your State of society excommunicated a prominent poli- a pauper. tician from your midst for advertising medicines of this class sometime before. Oregon has nothing to regret in those cases, for they speak well for the humanity of her people. If there is one crime more hellish than another. it is the slaughter of unborn innocence.

And yet we who so heartily condemn this cowardly and appalling crime can perhaps have little idea of the shame and horror and remorse which drove of the republic, we do not know of a principle this erring girl to seek oblivion among on which to base an objection; but when they strangers, and concealment and relief are inveigled to our shores with the design of from yet another villain, whose traffic using them to degrade and subjugate a class of is in the blood of embryo humanity, Our citizens, then we have a tag is moral ele and whose wealth is the product of ments that it is not necessary to protect the young womanhood's dishonor.
