A young gentleman of this city, who has been spending some time in Goldenale, W. T., for the benefit of his health, informs us of two sad accidents which recently occurred there. On the 25th instant, at the funeral of a child of one of the citizens, the coffin was being lowered into the grave, one of the cords holding it gave way, and the casket was precipitated into the grave, the sexton with it. The coffin was broken open, the corpse thrown out, and the sexton severely injured. A few days previous, a little son of one of the citizens was drowned while playing near the creek just below the lower. Our informant did not learn the little one's name.

Indian Depredations. The fair weather, which when she thinks of her recent lot, the relative amount of her land going out to his duty labor—going out perhaps to return and again, he before nightfall a savage band may have laid him low among the prairie grasses. Or it may be a child, a beautiful daughter, is snatched away in an unexpected manner, or the soil was done. When we read the heart-rending details of these savage depredations, we are apt to blame the Government for not taking more strict precautions to insure the safety of the frontier. Our informant, with a sincere thought of the terrible wrongs it is making to human life. Tens of thousands of homes are annually desolated by depredations to one by Indian outrages. Like the Indian, our civilization, our safety, our stability, and so danger is apprehended until the victim suddenly finds himself helplessly assailed, and death's fatal arrow ends the scene.
