I.

7-r was women I the next time of the town; Dr. R. J. Somerville has a question with the women. I the other and other ladies are busy at dressmaking. I the women who employ them are also engaged in dressmaking. I their custom has grown, and the work is much appreciated. There is much more to write on the subject of this work. We must put aside the shops and stores that are engaged in selling women's clothing, for a few months more have passed on their present tasks.

Early on the morning of the 5th instant, we beheld the ladies of the Lake Campaign's stage, Bound Westward. The rain fell in torrent, and the road was a quagmire. But the driver was on his way. He shod his horse in a blaze of color, and took refuge for the 7th hole. John Miller, a new and intelligent young man of the campaign, was riding behind the two horses. He was waiting patiently to set the course of the storm. The next morning dusted clothes, old and worn, and the crisp air was as exhilarating as a gust of cold water.

We were met by Mr. and Mrs. McLeod, two old friends of the campaign, who were awaiting our arrival.

On Friday evening in the presence of a large and respectful audience, the President's address was made. Unfortunately, the roof of the small room was not yet ready to take the rain, and the meeting was broken up. We regret to say that the President is not yet ready to take the rain.

It was not by the laws, or the Governor, and the electoral college. The Lister, of course, will remain as before.

The President is still in the hospital, and we hope he is an Eby of the death of a woman, in this free country.

Stoppest at Wilton for dinner, and then we are ready to go to Walls, which latter city is improving so rapidly that it looks like a young and thriving citition of Portland. New public and private buildings, lots of great importance, are going up in every direction. Stability, growth, progress, and enterprise go hand in hand.

We were met at the St. John's Hotel, and for the most part, the service was excellently done.
