This journal will signalize its Eleventh Year of Publication by commencing the use of

CREAM TINT BOOK PAPER

On September 15, 1881,

And at the same date will present to its readers the opening chapter of a new Serial Story, entitled

THE BEGINNING OF THE END:

An English Tale,

By A. A. CLEVELAND, of Astoria.

This story comprises twenty-five chapters, is of a quaint, peculiar and original style, and carries the characters through the different phases of English law and custom with strict fidelity to fact. The author has worked up the plot and counterplots in a manner that bristles throughout with points of intense interest. The incidents follow one another in rapid succession, and the different elements of human passion are vividly depicted. The story combines the fascination of a novel with the attractiveness of history.

The New Northwest will also contain its usual quota of Editorials, Editorial Correspondence, Essays and Communications; carefully prepared summaries of Local, Domestic, Foreign and Dramatic News; Poetry, Short Stories, Comic Verse, Sketches, and Miscellaneous Matter; and last, but by no means least, a general digest of Woman Suffrage news and arguments in favor of the reform—the whole making a moral and elevating journal that should be found by the fireside of every home in the Northwest,
