THE SEAL QUESTION AGAIN.

It is claimed that the Paris Rules have resulted in a high degree of slaughter. The first year's trial of the Paris restrictions seems to have resulted in an appeal from the United States to other nations to stop pelagic sealing in Bering sea altogether next year. In proof of its good faith on government, it is reported, would suspend its own seal killing entirely on the Pribilof islands at much loss of revenue, and perhaps at the risk of having to indemnify the lessees of the islands.

THIS WHALE IS LOADED.

With a Dangerous Bomb Under His Hide He Challenges All Comers.

The steam whaler Belvedere arrived from a year's whaling cruise Wednesday with only five sperm and right whales to her credit. When she left port last December, she went in search of sperm whales in the South seas, but with poor success. The first one that the crew in the boats got within reach of was near the Sandwich Islands. It was a monster sperm whale, and all five boats put off in pursuit of it. One that was commanded by Mate-Philip Cook crept up to within range of it, and a bomb to which a line was attached was successfully fired into it, but the explosion with which the bomb was charged failed to work.

Away the whale went, skimming along at a frightful rate just under the surface and lashing the water into foam in his agony. The long line was soon run out, but its end was securely fastened to the boat, and the frail craft was soon flying along in tow of the whale. The monster did not seem to relish being made a tugboat of, and he stopped and turned on his pursuers. For a moment he watched the occupants of the small boat again slowly creeping upon him. When about half of the fishery vessel had been covered, the whale suddenly flipped his huge tail in the air and went under the surface of the ocean. A moment later he rose within a few yards of the boat and went at it with a rush, his huge jaws open and showing every tooth. The whale can of anger. Before another shot could be fired the monster rolled over and caught the boat between his jaws. There was a crushing of timbers, and all the crew but one went foundering in the water. The missing man was Andrew Cook, and he sat in the bow of the boat just where the great jaws came together. It is supposed that he was taken in the whale's mouth, and as the monster sank after his attack the man was carried down far below the surface and did not come up again.

The men in the other boats arrived and picked up their struggling comrades, but the crews were too much afraid to continue the attack, and they put back to the ship with all speed.

When the whaler next came to the surface, he again made an attack on the boat he had wrecked, and he did not leave it until it was smashed into kindling wood. For five days after that the whale remained about the ship inviting attack from the small boats, but the infuriated monster was let alone, and now the South sea has a giant fish swimming about in its waters with a highly explosive and dangerous bomb secreted under its thick coat of blubber that is liable to explode at any moment. —San Francisco Examiner.

CHOLLY'S GOSSIP.

Paragraphs That Contain Information For the Delectation of the Select.

I have received a number of letters asking me to disclose the names of the "gossamer" that is making one pretty young married woman so very happy by their well distributed attentions and favors.

It would be entirely unfair to tell. There is no fun in starting scandal. It is only proper to comment upon matters as they are, as the world knows them and sees them.

The spiritless and the object of its devotion were all to be seen at the horse show daily.

The names are immaterial. It is the originality of the idea and the woman's complacency that makes the subject amusing.

The fufing of the Knickerbocker club over an iron extension boiler for the sidewalk to protect their pretty varnished boots and greased hats as they pass in and out of the club to and from their carriages.

It really is a nuisance in stormy weather to get one's boots gummy or one's shirt bosom rained on while getting from a cab to the door, and I should think that other clubs would follow the sensible example set by the dandies.

Now, chaps, open your brainboxes wide and stuff this pointer in:

It isn't "goff" at all, and if you think it is you are in such a hopeless condition of bad form that your lawyer can only save you on the plea of incompetent parents.

Nobody over the water pronounces it "goff," except the caddies who work for piffance a day, and I am sure there can't be any chaps within shot of Delmonico's who want to be put on the same level as a caddie.

"Goff" is awfully off.

Call it "gawff," and people will think you are crazy maybe, but you will be right English up to the top notch, don't you know?

"Goff" goes.

Mr. A. M. Bagley requests me to contradict as briefly as possible the statement that he is engaged in marriage to Mrs. Parson Stevens.

It is done.—Cholly Knickerbocker in New York Herald.

DO YOU TWIG?

An Interesting Little Story About the Trees, Leading Ladies, Etc.

All London is laughing in its sleeve just now over an unexpected incident in the life of a young woman named Mrs. Patrick Campbell. It was recently announced that Mrs. Campbell would be the wife of Mr. Treves, the leading American during his approaching American tour. This occasioned surprise in London, because it was known that Mrs. Treves, a very charming and successful actress, was opposing this project tooth and nail.

The trees have been married for 15 years, and as they have been blessed with no small twigs of their own, Mrs. Treves has been able to devote herself heart and soul to her husband and her art. She has been her husband's leading woman for so long that naturally she resented another actress taking her place. In fact, so strong was the opposition Mrs. Treves brought to bear that Mrs. Campbell's engagement was called off, but during the last fortnight circumstances have arisen that will compel Mrs. Treves to remain at home until after the month of April, and the joke of the matter is that Mrs. Treves herself is delighted that she has written to Mr. Campbell and begged her to take her place in Mr. Treves's company.—New York Sun.

Capital Needed There.

Consular notices received at the department of state warn Americans against emigrating to Mexico with a view to permanent settlement with insufficient means or without informing themselves in a reliable way as to the prospects for earning livelihood. While there are undoubtedly good opportunities in Mexico for enterprising and thrifty, it is, like other countries, a land of varying conditions, and it often happens that disappointment is the result of emigration undertaken upon insufficient or misleading information or without resources which are always necessary to success in a new country.

Many Americans have been induced by alluring statements as to the cheapness of coffee raising, etc., to emigrate to Mexico within the past year, and some have lost their all by so doing. For these reasons consular officers caution Americans against the representations of speculators, who are always on the watch for the unwary.—Philadelphia Press.

The First Was Last.

The race between the steamers Delano from New Orleans and Darlington from Galveston for the honor of being the first cotton ship to enter the Manchester ship canal almost ended in disaster. The Darlington arrived in the Mersey and anchored. The Delano, arriving a few hours later, made a dash for the canal entrance, taking the risk of the unfavorable state of the tide. This made the Darlington's captain angry, and he unavailingly followed, with the result that he was stranded on a mud bank and had to wait for several hours for a turn in the tide, the Delano, of course, easily winning the race.—Manchester Guardian.

Outwitting the Venetian Hotel Keeper.

Having discovered that the vagaries of some of the Paris hotel proprietors in the way of charges have influenced a number of English and American families who used to spend some weeks at certain seasons of the year in the French capital to give it a wide berth, so, if they do stay, to go to furnished apartments in preference to a hotel, the International Sleeping Car company contemplates buying or building houses in the best parts of Paris and having them let out on that principle. One advantage of the proposed system is that visitors will be saved the trouble of searching out quarters after their arrival. They will be able to select, when arranging for their journey, the class of apartments they require, and if proper notice was made in the past, they would be furnished in their style that is desired.—Westminster Budget.

Mrs. Cleveland.

Mrs. Cleveland, it is understood, will have from a very early date in the participation of an interesting race which is to occur in March next. Several ladies of the diplomatic corps will be engaged in the winter for the same season, including the beautiful American belle of the French embassy, Mrs. Yule, the Chevalier's wife, and Mrs. Adams. The race is to be held in the grounds of the Hotel de Ville in Paris.
