WOMAN'S WORLD.

A YOUNG PHILADELPHIA WOMAN ESTABLISHES A NEW INDUSTRY.

Biggest of Women's Colleges—Women Stenographers—Woman's Progress In 1894. She Was Not a Club Woman—Dressing When You Are Sick.

The waning of the nineteenth century provides such indisputable proof of feminine ingenuity in finding the key to new doors of opportunity that at times it seems that no more doors remain to be unlocked, but to a Philadelphia girl belongs the credit of successfully establishing a profession for women which still retains the flavor of novelty.

With truly feminine instinct for discerning the golden opportunity Miss E. V. Cornelius has started in to do the regular daily and weekly marketing for fashionable families of the city. Early in the morning, armed with notebook and pencil, the little market woman of Philadelphia trips off to the house of each patron, receives the order for any household necessities all the way from a turkey to the proverbial "pinch of salt." Giving the order marks the extent of the taxation upon the nerves of my fashionable lady. The little market woman does the rest.

Professional marketing is a new field in the range of occupations for women, but one in which a successful harvest awaits the right gleaner. Delicatessen presided over by women have by this time familiarized themselves with all fashionable quarters of the city. Every year the professional cook in lace trimmed cap and apron makes her bow upon the lecture platform. She is always sure of a large audience. Cooking classes are multiplying both under private auspices and in the public schools, and the band of professional caterers and interior decorators is steadily increasing. The business of the little market woman is something of a combination of all of these. Miss Cornelius has gone into this new profession for women both as a science and an art. The requirements and possibilities of the work have been taken into consideration from the purchase of a juicy tenderloin at the stall of the busy market to the composition of a menu for the day and the initiation of the household Abigail into artistic and pretty ways of serving food and decorating the table.

There is no poetic sentimentality about the little market woman. Her profession is a matter of bread and meat, of character and self respect to her. Whatever success she has commanded is another proof of the fact that adverse circumstances are overcome by perseverance and persistent work. To quote her own words, "Since I was 14 every penny of my support I have earned myself," which is not the least credit due to this courageous little market woman of Philadelphia.—Philadelphia Times.

Biggest of Women's Colleges.

There is an endowment fund in the hands of the trustees in Boston for the establishment of one of the largest of free female colleges. It is the bequest of John Simmons, one of Boston's most successful merchants, who died in 1870.

The original Simmons bequest consisted of this property: To his daughter Marion he gave the granite front store at the corner of Franklin and Arch streets, the granite front store on Water and Devonshire streets and the land upon which it sat, and the old Simmons mansion on Tremont street and the land belonging to it. At the decease of Marion the estate, together with the accumulations, was to be given in trust to the Simmons Female college. To his daughter Alvina was given the granite front store situated at the corner of Franklin and Hawley streets and the land belonging to it, the whole to be held in trust during the daughter's life, and at her death the estates, exclusive of the accumulations thereon, were to be given to the college. In addition there was left $50,000 in money for the purpose of building a block as a nucleus for the college fund, the income to be held in trust.

The object of founding the Simmons Female college was for the purpose of teaching medicine, music, drawing, designing, telegraphy and other branches of art, science and industry.

The Simmons college might today be a splendid reality but for the big fire of 1872. All the fine business blocks given by the Simmons bequest were left in ruins. The mutual fire companies, far from being able to pay the insurance on the Simmons blocks, assessed the trustees of the college fund.

Since 1872 the trustees have been using the income from these buildings to pay up the mortgage indebtedness on them. The present trustees—H. G. Nichols and Joseph Sawyer—are paying off the mortgages on the various estates as fast as the income from the estates will allow.

The trustees say that at the present rate of income the mortgage indebtedness will be cleared up in a few years. The property, when free of debt, will be worth several million dollars, and as soon as the estates are free of debt the income fund of $500,000 designed by Mr. Simmons as a building fund will accumulate in a very short time, when the trustees are required to erect suitable college buildings at a cost not to exceed said sum.

The trustees say when the college is founded it will have one of the largest, if not indeed the largest, regular income behind it in the world.—Boston Advertiser.

Women Stenographers.

Two years ago some of the women stenographers and typewriters of this city formed an association. They were 13 then. They are 150 now. They are known as the National Association of Women Stenographers and are incorporated. Within a few weeks the arrangements and legal forms of a sick benefit have been completed, so that women who are alone in the world may count in case of sickness upon three months' financial support and a womanly sympathy extending far beyond that limitation. Meetings are held every three months, and addresses have been made by Mrs. Charles Henrotin and Mrs. Henry Shepard. It is their intention to have lectures from time to time from women who can inspire them to broad and noble work. They have now begun—some threescore of them—the study of parliamentary law at Central Music hall, an earnest that the association is going to transact its business with vigor and legality.

Miss M. E. Orr, who holds the gold medal for the championship of the world for speed in typewriting, is an honorary member of the association. Their president is Miss Nettie McLaughlin, a Chicago girl of considerable literary ability and marked executive force. She, with Miss Harriett Shinn, will go as delegate to the national council of women to be held in Washington. This is the only body of business women in the country that belongs to the national council. Miss Shinn will read a paper to open the discussion on "Woman as a Factor In the Modern Business World." Miss Shinn was the first president of the association and has a fine mind and broad sympathies. She is the daughter of a Methodist minister and is doing a noble, womanly work outside the exactions of her profession.—Chicago Record.

Woman's Progress In 1894.

In concluding an interesting article on the progress of woman in various parts of the world in 1894 Mrs. Warner Snoad, president of the International Woman's union, says:

"Thus it will be seen that progress has been literally all along the line in different countries and in most diverse subjects. Success, moreover, has come in competition, so that no allowance need be made on the score of sex. These distinctions, gained without favor, place the position of woman on an altogether impregnable basis. No longer can it be said that women are inferior to men in brain power. Theorists of the type of Dr. Crichton Brown may prove to demonstration that women are unfit for severe mental labor, but they cannot explain away the facts which directly controvert such a view. Yet in spite of this there is no social earthquake—the old, old story is as sweet as ever, homes are as well cared for, and baby worship has not ceased. God forbid it should be otherwise! Even the jealously guarded women of the east are feeling the reflex of western thought. Lady doctors are admitted in Turkey. Miss Yoseph will soon practice in Persia, Miss Eddy in Syria and Dr. Mary Sugana in Japan. In India many native ladies are studying physic, there is a tiny ripple of progress on the dead sea of Zenana life, and the maharajah of Mysore has forbidden infant marriages. Everywhere the world moves, and while recording the triumphs of our own sex we gratefully remember the chivalrous men who stand by us alike through praise and blame."

She Was Not a Club Woman.

The attitude assumed by some non-club women toward the woman's club question, as a whole, is amusingly shown in a little incident related by Helen M. Winslow in the Boston Transcript:

"When the North Shore club of Lynn gave a reception the other day," says she, "they sent carriages to meet all visitors at the trains. On the arrival of the 3:30 train from Boston the half dozen ladies who had been delayed till then were met by a cordial little woman with the inquiry, 'Are you for the North Shore club?' and when we replied in the affirmative she asked us to come with her to the carriage in waiting. Naturally we felt that every possible courtesy was being shown us and were eminently satisfied with our lot and especially the cordial little lady's part in it. Finally, just as we were going off to our carriages, she espied another woman who was evidently waiting for something. She was a well dressed, middle aged woman and really looked as if she might be eligible for our party. (I beg her pardon.) And so our cordial little hostess stepped up and put to her the question, 'Are you for the North Shore club?' But now the stranger straightened herself up, and the unutterable scorn she looked! She did not deign to answer by any words, but that look plainly said, 'I should hope not!' And she gazed at us as if we were a lot of freaks the like of which she had never come across before. And we? Oh, we fled to our carriages squelched."

Dressing When You Are Sick.

If only able to sit up in bed, a loose sack shaped garment called a nightingale is most handy for slipping over the nightdress, writes Emma M. Hooper in The Ladies' Home Journal. It is made of cashmere or flannel and usually has the edges hemmed and feather stitched. All of the pattern houses issue a pattern of it. When able to sit up for a time, a wrapper of striped flannel having a princess back and loose front is comfortable, worn with or without the nightgown, but I believe in changing all of the clothes when able to get out of bed. Do not fuss too much about dressing and thus become tired.

Wear pure wool underwear, a soft boned corset or corset waist, then add a flannel and outer petticoat and the wrapper, with easy bedroom shoes of crochet wool, felt, wadded silk, etc. Dainty shoulder shawls and sofa covers are always appreciated by one doomed to such a weary life as must be led in a sickroom. Plenty of cushions having removable denim or linen covers are necessary. Select colors for wrapper, shawls, etc., that are cheerful and becoming. Cardinal, garnet, reddish brown, pinkish gray, light blue, yellow, rose, bright old rose and cream are good sickroom colors. A bit of lace gathered in the neck and sleeves will help to conceal the marks of illness. Have soft materials, exquisite cleanliness and dainty colorings.

Thoughtful Women.

The women of Denver and Colorado, to a greater extent probably than those of any other state, have abandoned the hat wearing habit where it is unnecessary and when it is annoying to others. It is a beautiful sight to look upon to visit the Denver theaters and see the large number of women who remove their hats during the performance. Still other thoughtful ones are careful to wear small hats—flat hats or some other style, shape, fashion or variety which will not cause ugly thoughts and bad words to arise behind them.—Denver Times.

The New Moire Velvet.

Have you seen the new moire velvet? It is one of the belated importations which arrives just in time to figure as a midwinter novelty. Novel it assuredly is and very rich and beautiful too. It is watered in such a way that a few feet off it looks like an accordion plaited velvet. In robin's egg blue and a tender rose pink it is charming, and I should think it would be greatly in demand for evening, either as skirts to be worn with chiffon bodices or as theater waists, with puffed sleeves of the chiffon.—New York News.

The New Womanhood.

In his recent work on the just now much talked about theme—the new woman—James C. Fernald speaks thus of woman's relation to the home: "It is not that she can do nothing else, but that she can do this as no other can. If she does not make home, home cannot be made. The world needs her there. Her own heart calls her there. The attempt to abolish the individual home and keep the ideal woman is a predestined failure."

Harriet Hubbard Ayer.

Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer, who was unjustly incarcerated in an insane asylum for 14 months, declares that she will make it her life work to expose the treatment of sane people in asylums. She is about to publish a book relating her experiences. She is deeply interested in the cause of working women, especially those who have been reduced from wealth to poverty.—Exchange.

A New Sort of Club.

We find in The Journal of Household Economies a suggestion for a new sort of club: "Should every graduate who is not obliged at once to become a wage earner gather a circle of her neighbors into a sanitary club and institute a systematic study of sanitary topics, how long would it be before each of these circles would wage successful battle against life destroying bacteria?"

Clara Myers Flora.

Mrs. Clara Myers Flora, wife of Rev. Noah Flora of Dallas Center, Ia., was lately ordained to the full ministry and eldership in the Progressive Brethren church by prayer and the laying on of hands. Mrs. Flora is a student, an eloquent speaker and a successful revivalist. She has her regular charges and meets with much success.

Mrs. Mitchell's Argument.

Mrs. Lucretia M. B. Mitchell has prepared a statement showing that the women of Philadelphia county, Pa., are assessed on real estate $1,537,575.66 and personal estate and money at interest at $35,734,133.68. This covers 37 wards and is an average of 20 per cent. She points to this as an argument for equal suffrage.

Rev. Lydia Sexton.

Rev. Lydia Sexton, who died in Seattle, Wash., a short time ago, at the age of 95 years, was born in Sussex county, N. J., and preached for 50 years. She was a cousin of Bishop Matthew Simpson, and her grandfather was Marquis Anthony Cozat, famous in the early history of the colonies.

A bill has been introduced in the Tennessee senate to authorize the holding of the office of district school director or of public schools by women. In the house Mr. Shelton has introduced one authorizing married women to sue in the courts of the state.

Mrs. Ellen Sully Fray of Toledo has recently been appointed one of three administrators of the estate of Mrs. Sarah Stevens, whose death occurred a short time ago.

The most satisfactory dusters are those made from 5 cent cheesecloth. They should be cut a yard long and neatly hemmed.

Lady Henry Somerset will be one of the speakers at the legislative hearings for woman suffrage in Massachusetts and in Maine.

Dr. Julia Holmes Smith has again entered the field of journalism. She conducts the woman's page in the Chicago Times.

Dr. Annio Walker of Mississippi is superintendent of the hospital at Fuchau, China.
