What It Means.
One of the most important railroad projects in the United States is that of the Astoria road. Its building means a great deal to the northwest. It is well set forth in the following statement by a prominent man to the Portland Star: "It is only necessary to glance at a map to see that the mouth of the Columbia river is the proper point from which the grain of the Willamette valley, Eastern Oregon and Washington should be shipped to foreign ports. Astoria is nearer to the farms on which the grain is grown, and it is further by 600 miles for a ship to go to the sound for a cargo than to load at Seattle, as against 20 miles at Astoria. He states that every man, woman and child in Portland, the Willamette valley, along the banks of the Columbia, and in Eastern Oregon and Washington is vitally interested in the building of the road to Astoria. It makes an outlet to market for grain at the lowest possible cost, as the roads will lay the grain down in Astoria at the same rate they now charge to Portland, it opens a market of lower rates for the product of the timber lands on the lower Columbia and will enable the packers of salmon and other fish to load their wares on cars direct that will go through to destination without transfer.—Albany.

THE GREELEY CAMPAIGN.

When Greeley was the presidential candidate his supporters dubbed him "hoonest old Horace." The opposition, remembering his ball in Jefferson Davis, whom most abolitionists wished hung called him "old ball-bonds." "Grant best Davis," he said, "Greeley balled him." He was named "Horror Greeley" and his homely manners were made the subject of innumerable jests. Cartoons, which played a great figure in this campaign, ridiculously exaggerated his comeliness. On the unfortunate B. Grant Brown the starburst heaped the worst disgrace which a political candidate can receive, that of being ignored. His views and his record were scarcely ever mentioned; only his bare name came before the public. In every cartoon by Nast where Greeley was represented, a tag bearing the legend, "and Grant Brown," hung from his coat tail. Carl Schurz and Whitelaw Reid, both fighting Greeleyites, were pictured with classical and pedantic features, eye-glasses big as tea cups, and legs to feet long. The Greeley press made Grant call to his intimates to bid him good bye as he sang: "My friends have gone to Chappaqua, Oh, put me in my little bed." Chappaqua was Greeley's country residence. How many democrats about Roseburg voted for Greeley we are unable to say.

THE CONFIDENTIAL PAPER.

The British Complaint, Paines and Seolax
The newspaper is a member of the family in England and regularly comes to breakfast with the other members. The London Times is a kind of oldest son among newspapers, and Punch the jolly bachelor uncle, who makes occasional visits. Englishmen take their newspapers into their confidence and have a half way of writing to them on all sorts of subjects. If an Englishman rows down the Thames and stops for luncheon at an inn and is overcharged, he writes to his newspaper, just as a little boy writes to his mother, to complain to his mamma of the rough treatment of his playmates, and later on the first letter is followed by others, in which the comparative merits and cost of light luncheons on the continent, in Serivigapam, in Kamchaska and everywhere else where the Englishman has eaten and drunk—and where there he not done these—is discussed as fond. If horses stumble and fall in Rotten row, there are letters on the subject which go into the matter of roadbuilding, modern horsemanship, the merits of the hiko, with quotations from Virgil and anecdotes of accidents that happened half a century ago. Not only the more serious weekly, but also the daily newspapers, give one the impression that they feel themselves to some extent responsible for the contemporary amittings of the accounts of the day of judgment. On the other hand, the better class of English newspapers do not indulge in rash suppositions, hasty generalizations, uncertain guesses at probable future happenings and the daily exploitation of the personal affairs of notorious nobles. And one may be permitted to say diffidently that perhaps this is preferable. If Mr. Balfour, for example, were to go abroad for a holiday, it would be considered vulgar to chronicle his doings and dinings and absolutely brutal and boorish to write particulars of the dress and behavior of his sister, or his wife, if he had one. The sense of fair play of a nation of sportsmen does not permit an editor to torment even his enemy from behind a woman's petticoats.—Price Collier in Forum.

A Question of Recognition.

Miss Kitty—Mamma, will you know folks in heaven as we do here? Mamma—I think there is no doubt of that, my dear.
"Will I know Jane Goppins?"
"Who is Jane Goppins?"
"She's the big freckled girl that lives over the grocery store down the street."
"If you are both good enough to go to heaven, my dear, you will certainly know her."
(After some moments of profound cogitation) "I won't have to speak to her, will I, mamma?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Fine Fool.

The elderly gentleman was getting a pair of shoes, and the clerk was striving to please.
"You have an elegant foot, sir," he said as he smoothed the leather down across the instep.
"Um," sniffed the old gent, eyeing him narrowly, "I guess you ain't the chap that was coming to see my daughter every other night till last week?"—Detroit Free Press.

Beware of Ostments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by J. C. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and is made by J. C. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, price 75 cts. per bottle.
