REVIVAL OF BUSINESS. Some of our exchanges are speak ing hopefully of returning prosperity. Those of the democratic persuasion attribute it to and take credit for it as the result of a governmental policy. That is begging the questity, but the amount drank was enortion. That business shall revive now mous. is the natural result of several causes.

First, that of a natural rebound from the extreme depression caused broker on the committee expressed his by the radical change of administration from the protective policy to that "for revenue only."

Second, that during the suspension of large importations and a decrease of manufactures a large stock of the United States bank was completof both imported and domestic man-James A. Bayard of Delaware, John ufactores, a surplus was worked off M. Mason and a Kentucky gentleman and consumed.

TAXING THE DRUMMERS.

The American drummer has been a subject of discussion in the house of commons recently, and the sugges tion was made that all commercial travelers doing business in the Uni ted Kingdom should be taxed. The president of the British board of trade, however, thought it would be steady ones carried off the honors, but impracticable as well as impolitic to gout, gravel and dropsy played haved do this. Philadelphia Gentlemen Drank In a Way

Among Americans up to 1855 the use and abuse of strong drink were almost universal, but it certainly affected their health less injuriously than at the present time. The worry and strain of modern business and social life shatter nerves now and lead to dram drinking to repair them. On the contrary, most of the excesses in the old times came after a solid dinner, and three or four bours were spent in rest and convivial-When the exchange was completed, in 1832, a dinner was given, and there was some apprehension that the wine would run out, and a well known surprise, as the company had not averaged more than three bottles apiece. A dozen Madeira were at hand, and smoking, drinking and whist were in order until 12, when the last bottle was drank, and then Prosser, the cook, brought in cold ducks and a mighty lobster salad. A gallon bowl of brandy punch was made as conducive to digestion. A tumbler of this finished the clerk, who went to sleep and was aroused at daybreak to drink a cup of coffee, and then all went down the steps and walked away in the fresh morning air, none the worse in appear-

SAD LIFE OF A BEAUTY.

The Countess of Dudley a Devoted Wife to a Repulsive Husband. Georgina, countess of Dudley, enjoys the well deserved reputation of being not only one of the most beautiful matrons in London society, but also one of the kindest and most warm hearted of the great ladies of Mayfair. She is a devoted mother and deserves a great amount of credit for the manner in which she has brought up her children and for the devoted care and loyalty which she manifested to her eccentric husband. Until his death her existence was little better than a martyrdom, which she bore with the most exemplary nationce and fortitude The late earl was many years her senior and the reverse of handsome, in addition to which he in many matters was entirely insane having inherited his madness from his father All this would have caused many a mother to hesitate before even permitting her daughter to wed such a man, but Lady Dudley's mother, Lady Louisa Moncrieffe, dazzled by the earl's income of over $3,000,000 a year, forced her lovely daughter to bind herself to

The contrast between the beautiful woman and the almost repulsive looking husband who was her constant companion was so startling that it drew forth the hackneyed exclamation of "beauty and the beast" wherever they went. Had Lord Dudley been less wealthy he would inevitably have been confined in a madhouse, but even during the closing years of his life Lady Dudley never permitted him to be considered as insane, although he seldom experienced lucid moments. Lady Dudley was the second wife of the late earl and has seven children, six sons and one daughter. - Philadelphia Press.

I'm a Manxman, and I have inherited a rugged constitution. I seldom wear gloves even in your winters, and much the time I go without an overcoat. For many years I followed the sea, and I had one adventure that few would have lived to tell of. It was a midnight of December when I was ordered aloft to stow the main royal, and before I knew what I was about I fell from the vardarm into the sea. No one on deck had noticed my fall, and apparently no one had heard my cry, for the ship kept right on. There I was, with heavy boots and a heavy coat, alone amid the waves sel about sunset, and I thought she'd come along and pick me up. I had been a good swimmer all my life, and I kept The financial speech of the ex-Prime affoat till daybreak, when that other

Not long ago, says a writer in The Realm, I was walking in the garden at Hawarden with Mr. Gladstone. Well, this is what I do with it," said Mr. Gladstone. Thereupon he placed the point of his walking stick on the middle of the scrap of paper, twisted the stick round and round. and with much dexterity left the bit of paper in the soil and out of sight. An American gentleman recently went over the field of Waterloo with a guide who boasted that he escorted General Sheridan over the scene of Napoleon's great defeat. "What did General Sheridan say?" asked my friend. "Oh, nothing." "He must have said something." "Well, he only said, 'Is was a -- good place for a fight.""
