THE CHILD'S PRAYER.

Into her chamber went A little maid one day, And by a chair she knelt And thus began to pray: "Jesus, my eyes I close; Thy favor I cannot see; If thou art near me, Lord, I pray thee speak to me. A still small voice she heard within her soul: "What is it, child? I hear thee. Tell me all." "I pray thee, Lord," she said, "That thou wilt condescend To tarry in my heart, And ever be my friend. I would not go astray; Oh, let me have thy hand. To lead me in the way." "Fear not, I will not leave thee, child, alone." She thought she felt a soft hand press her own. "They tell me, Lord, that all The living pass away; The aged soon must die, And even children may. Oh, let my parents live Till I a woman grow, For if they die, what can A little orphan do?" "Fear not, my child. Whatever ills may come, I'll not forsake thee till I bring thee home."—Hodges Recd. Her little prayer was said, And from her chamber now She passed forth with the light Of heaven upon her brow. "Mother, I've seen the Lord. His hand in mine I felt, And, oh, I heard him say As by my chair I knelt: "Fear not, my child. Whatever ills may come, I'll not forsake thee till I bring thee home."—Hodges Recd.

ONE COINCIDENCE EXPLAINED.

A New Advertising Trick in the Book Trade Which Had Its Success. "Have you a novel called —," by —," asked a young woman of an attendant in a city library. "No, and we never heard of the book until today, but we have had at least ten applicants for it since 9 o'clock this morning. I beg your pardon, but would you please tell me how you heard of that book?" "Why," she replied hesitatingly, "I received a note from a friend telling me to read it."

"Well," he said, with a smile, "the others who applied had heard of it in the same way." The young woman looked surprised, but said nothing and passed out. A man who had overheard the conversation spoke of it to his wife that evening as a curious coincidence. "Coincidence, fiddlesticks!" she said. "Wait a moment until I show you what I received this morning." And going to her desk she brought this note for him to read: "My Dear—If you want a surprise read — by —. You will immediately recognize the character —. Hastily yours, E. —. Well, I thought over all of the Elias, Evas, Emmas and Elizabeths of my acquaintance, but I could not find one, but I could not recognize the handwriting. It was a clear, round hand, but unformed, like a child's. Coincidence, indeed! It is a clever advertisement, new in the book trade, but I have seen similar letters. Four years ago a furniture firm sent out a letter imitating a letter, written in a delicate feminine hand, dated at a country villa and addressed 'Ma chere amie.' It was a gossip, pleasant letter, and at the end requested the friend to buy her two or three pieces of furniture, little pen and ink sketches of which were pinned to the cover. Of course the price and where to buy them were not overlooked."—New York Sun.

Both Died in Jerusalem. Monk Gerbert, who ascended the papal throne under the title of Sylvester II, anticipating Roger Bacon, made a bronze head, which, like that owned by the reputed inventor of gunpowder, was capable of answering him like an oracle. From this head he learned that he would not die until he performed mass at Jerusalem, and so he determined to live forever, by taking special care not to go to the Holy City. Unfortunately Gerbert soon found that brass heads, like other jangling sounds, "but keep the word of promise to our ear and break it to our hope," for one day he was taken seriously ill just after he had celebrated mass in one of the churches at Rome. On inquiring the name of this particular church he heard, much to his dismay, that it was popularly known as "Jerusalem," and he died in great agony a few hours afterward. Five hundred years after this Master Robert Fabian gives us the story of the death of King Henry IV, and tells us how that in his youth it had been prophesied that he would die in Jerusalem, and that the prophecy, as in the case of Gerbert, was in a way fulfilled by the king dying in the Jerusalem chamber at Westminster.—London Standard.

The Foundation Stone of Success.

The one great rule of business is that of honesty, absolute and unqualified honesty, writes Edward W. Bok in the Ladies' Home Journal. All the rules of business are worthless if they are not founded on that one and only foundation stone to true commercial success. Honesty is not alone the best policy in business. It is the one and only policy. Upon it, and upon it alone, can a good reputation be built, and a man, in business without a reputation for honesty might just as well stop. Any deviation from the rule of honesty in business may bring temporary gain, but it invariably means permanent loss. On the other hand, a strict adherence to an honest policy may mean a temporary loss, but it is sure to result in a permanent gain.

The Statesman's Wife.

"F'wat," asked Mrs. Grogan severely, "kep' yez so late 'n' night?" "Oh wuz down at Harrigan's barroom discussin' questions at the coinage. In-therechangin' oideas, Oi may say, Mistruss Grogan, on free silver." "And f'win yez got through yez had the oideas and Harrigan had 's'ilver. It is a f'ine statesman yez are, Oi doin't think!"—Indianapolis Journal.
