Following upon this report by Capt. Symons, Senator Mitchell had an item placed in the last sundry civil act, providing for an examination of the harbor by a board, to consist of three officers of the Engineer Corps. The Board consisted of Lieutenant-Colonel Stickney. Major Post and Major Sears. Their report was forwarded to the secretary of soon. war four months ago. While the Board did not give any opinion as to the practicability of a scheme for deepening the bay, the tone of the report is decidedly adverse, as the following extract will indicate: "It will be observed that the Board (under this resolution) is not called upon to express any opinion as to whether a further permanent deepening of the water on the bar is practicable, or, if practicable, whether the commerce of the port, present or prospective, will justify a further expenditure." . . "To the reports of Major Hener and is of the opinion that if any further deepening of the bar can be made it will be capital and muscle to develope them. only by prolonging the present jetties."

would take a good deal to remove his there, too. opposition, if in any way, it could be removed. Senator McBride thereupon consulted with Senator Mitchell as to what should be done. The latter immediately asked that the Oregon delegation be given a hearing before the committee and has summoned Messrs. Hermann and Ellis to be present and help face down the engineers' reports.

The item had a narrow, a very narrow escape in the river and harbor committee. One night, shortly before the committee made its tour of inspection down the Ohio river. Mr. Hermann walked into the committee room feeling more than usually jovial. The work of parceling out the "pork" was about completed The committee was to take final action on most of the items that night. Mr. Hermann had good reason to be satisfied for the committee had given him almost everything he asked for. As a matter of fact he had gotten more than he could possibly have obtained if he had been chairman of the committee, for two reasons. The first is that the appropriations for the state of the chairman are always most carefully and jealously scrutinized. The other reason is that his colleagues on the committee who had served with him were indignant at the speaker in passing him over, and knowing that it would injure him more or less in his state, wished to do everything in their power to help him out. And so it was that Mr. Hermann was more than usually jovial on the night in question.

Item after item was considered and state. determined. Finally the Yaquina Bay contract came up. Then a feeling of constraint crept over the committee.

A GOOD SELECTION.

It is with pleasure we observe that Mr. A. P. Armstrong, principal of the Portland Business College, has been nominated for the office of county school We have known Mr. Armstrong for many years, and take pleasure in adding our mite to the colossal praise of his worth as a man, his efficiency as an educator and his standing as a citizen, while a resident of Douglas county. Mr. Armstrong has taught in the public schools of Douglas county and was re-be followed by the submission of a claim garded as a first class teacher. As a for a money indemnity, which is now becitizen he has kept aloof from party trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels, preferring to devote his attender of the first trammels. teacher.
