WILLIAM MCKINLEY. Another Side. The Home Side. A well balanced symmetrical tree, in proper proportions, lacking in no essential part, is a pride and satisfaction to the arboriculturist and lover of nature, giving promise of fulfilling all the demands upon it, for which it was intended. So is it in human nature. The great and useful men to their fellows, and the world, are those who stand nearest complete. The choicest gifts of intellect, or even genius; the brightest gems of thought; the largest stores of learning, except they are in due proportion, guided by wise judgment in proper channels, fail of rich attainment, and are lost. How pitiable the sight of human wrecks, warped and stranded on the shores of this busy, utilitarian world, men whose bright intellects could grasp but one idea, one scheme, leaving the rest of their natures dwarfed and useless. It has been said by his opponents, I will not call them enemies, rather rivals and their partisans, that William McKinley was a man of one idea, protection; that outside of this in every phase or aim of his character, he was a nullity. This, whether said in ignorance or malice is false, and I affirm that all that goes to make up good, true, strong, manhood is his. Having spoken in a former article of this acknowledged attribute of his (not exhausting it however, so important is it) and passing by for the present, his stand for sound money, and his record for bravery in the hour of his country's peril, I desire to speak in this article of his human or home side; familiar perhaps to most of your readers, but which will bear repeating; the recital of which, we believe will endear him to every home in our fair land. We do not claim for William McKinley that he is a giant in intellect, a genius, or even a brilliant orator or word painter, as it is claimed for the boy orator of the Platt, but we do claim that he is intelligent, honest, capable, a man of firmness and decision, able to cope with a foe on the field of battle on the political arena. Fearless in the right, untiring in the discharge of duty, and yet withal affable and courteous, sincere in his friendship, and consistent in his religion. Though not polished or courtly as some, yet of gentle, loving disposition, "with sympathy for all." Not "to the manor born," a true American, one of the people, who needs no long line of ancestry, to prop up his claim to true manhood; ever ready and willing to serve his country in her hour of need or peril. The honored, martyred Garfield, never did a nobler action in his bright career, than when upon the grand occasion of his inauguration, amid a mighty throng of high and honorable personages, many of them resplendent in gay uniforms of rank or insignia of office; richly dressed women and men, every American a sovereign, all gathered to witness a favorite son, invested with the highest office in the gift of man. When the oath of office was administered, and the consummation reached, his first act was to turn to a little old woman by his side, unnoticed by that great crowd, shabby perhaps in comparison to the well dressed assembly about her, and taking her up tenderly in his arms, kissed her with all the filial love of his great heart. It was his mother. That mother, who in infancy rocked the cradle of him, who now for a term of years was to rule the greatest nation of the earth. The mother who guided his young intellect in the channels of truth and right and inspired his soul with high aims and lofty purposes. If it is true as we believe it is, that the glory of every true American is in the women of his household, then in such men as Garfield and McKinley is this beautiful truth fittingly emphasized. And of the latter we may say that amid the exacting toil, and the perplexities of official and political life, he never forgets his duties as a tender husband, or considerate son; and his regard and thoughtfulness of his aged mother as evinced in his daily walks with her, when at home, interesting her in pleasing conversation, doing much to make her last days pass with comfort. And it is the sincere wish of a host of friends, that she may live to see him reach the high position to which he aspires, for in a large measure his fitness for the place is due to her care and training. As I have often in my weariness and loneliness, looked upward to a group of loved ones, whose picture hung in my room, for whom it was my duty and privilege to toil and suffer, I would take courage and go on; so amid the trying hours of perplexing official duty; or perhaps evolving some intricate scheme in economics, Major McKinley looks to the picture above his desk, not a group, that has been denied him, the silent messengers having waited for a purer sphere, those sweet buds of promise, which only for a brief time, they might claim her on earth, but to that sweet, patient, hollowed face of a beloved, but invalid wife, and from this he takes his inspiration for pure thoughts and noble deeds, and if the picture before me of this woman, is a true presentment, I do not wonder at her magnetic power. Is not such a man to be trusted? Does he not, in character, and walk, give promise of the fulfillment of our hopes. Wise in council, strong in purpose, brave in war, exemplary and loving at home, with sound economic principles, standing for reform and progress, with ripe experience in governmental affairs. Will you not, through him, help to hurl back the disgraceful and dangerous tide of fanaticism and imbecility, that threatens to devastate our fair land, inviting repudiation and anarchy? Women of America, as you love your homes and your children, as you cherish the safe guards of society, honor, truth and integrity; use your influence to help on this work. You may not vote, but you may guide the hand that deposits the ballot, and when the battle is won for the right, you will share in its fruits, and help swell the chorus of victory, and place this man McKinley on the roll of honor, with Lincoln, Garfield and Grant, men who lived and toiled for the glory of our republic. He is a man, who stands complete in all the wealth of manhood's power; just, without fear, wise, discreet, To fell a foe, a friend to greet, And meet the crisis of the hour. R. E. More Hop Contracts. Hillsboro, Or., Aug. 20.—Hop contracts for 110,000 pounds have thus far been filed with the county clerk. In years heretofore but few hops have been contracted in this county, but this year the inability of growers to obtain picking money has compelled them to contract. A number of yards have not been cultivated, the owners not intending to pick. Those who have contracted with Lillenthal & Co., of San Francisco, for delivery, on November 1, are: Jacob Whitmore, of Laurel, 10,000 pounds at 6 cents, with 3 1/2 cents advance for picking; E. L. Mulloy and G. E. Haythorn, of Laurel, 15,000 pounds, at 6 cents per pound, 3 1/2 cents advance at picking time; R. Imbrie, of Hillsboro, 50,000 pounds, at 5 1/2 cents per pound, 1 cent advance for picking. Those contracting with Dole Bros. & Co., of Boston, for delivery on November 15, are James Sewell of Hillsboro, 20,000 pounds, at 6 cents, with 4 cents advance for picking; George Day, of Tualatin, 5000 pounds, at 6 cents, with 4 cents advance; S. A. Durham of Progress, 10,000 pounds, at 6 cents, with 4 cents advance for picking.

The Farmers and Free Silver. It is an undeniable and lamentable fact that the farmers of the United States have been having a hard time in recent years. They have produced a great deal of grain, but have not been able to sell it at profitable rates. That is to say, the prices of the things that they raise have been steadily declining until the point has been reached where there is practically little or nothing left over the cost of production so far as the leading crops are concerned. They can not be blamed, of course, for feeling discouraged and for trying to better their condition; but it is important for them to see that they do not deceive themselves in the choice of a method of relief. When they are told that the free and unlimited coinage of silver would increase the prices of their products and restore their former prosperity, they should not be in a hurry to credit the statement, but take time to investigate it in the light of well-known facts. They cannot fail to discover, if they thus study it, that it is a delusion and a snare, and that they would be more likely to lose than to gain by the substitution of cheap money for that which now exists.

A Valuable Prescription. Editor Morrison of Worthington, Ind., "Sam" writes: "You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for Constipation and Sick Headache, and as a general system tonic it has no equal." Mrs. Annie Stehle, 2625 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, was all run down, could not eat nor digest food, had a backache which never left her and felt tired and weary, but six bottles of Electric Bitters restored her health and renewed her strength. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Get a Bottle at A. C. Marsters' Drug Store.

There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
