WORKINGMEN INSULTED.

It is unfortunate for the good name of the people of the United States that a great political party should have selected a man as its candidate for the presidency whose sense of honor is so pliable as is Mr. Bryan's. The man does not hesitate to advise the employment of the most disreputable methods, nor is he at all backward in commending his nefarious schemes to others. In addressing a crowd the other day he noticed that quite a large number of workingmen were wearing the McKinley button. He immediately jumped to the conclusion that as a matter of course they had been coerced into wearing it by their employers, and in order to show his deep interest in their welfare he volunteered a bit of advice which ought to insure him the contempt of every honest workingman in the country. In the most confidential manner he told the wearers of the McKinley button that they should not do anything to endanger their jobs; that they should keep right on parading the McKinley button: that they should contribute their campaign fund to the McKinley collectors, and to deport themselves as scalous supporters of the Republican candidate, but on election day they should secretly use a pencil and scratch the McKinley electors. He told them that it was all right to be republicans and shout for McKinley every day of the campaign, but on election day they the ballot-box.

The wind reached its highest velocity shortly after The Peace of Mind Which the Resident of 12 o'clock. The instrument at the weather bureau registered 66 miles an hour, and then went to pieces. The barometer went to 28.80. It would have gone even below the record of 28.31 of 1893, had the storm continued longer. The blow was practically over within 23 hours, but for that time raged with an intensity heretofore unknown. Tin roofs were rolled up everywhere, as if they were made of tissue paper. There must have been 100 tons of tin rolled off wires fell everywhere, hundreds of roofs being totally demolished.

Shattered trees covered every street and these with hundreds of fallen wires made the streets impassable for hours. The total damage is estimated at from $700,000 to $1,000,000 in Savannah and Chatham counties.

The list of known fatalities is about nine in or near the city. There has been no way of reaching the island near the coast, where it is likely the fatalities number hundreds.

LOAD OF BROOKLYNITES.

Brooklyn Puts on With His Sunday Clothes Greatly Disturbed by the Strange Young Man's Actions.

There was an odd little episode in a on a recent Sunday afternoon, which gave rise to an amusing comedy of conhuman nature and the civilized obligation to restrain it. The Flatbush and Flatlands line runs away out into the region of cornfields, the roofs in Savannah. Bricks and truck farms and forests, lately gathered into Brooklyn's municipal area. When the car started from the end of the route It is impossible to enumerate the it had aboard one passenger, a pleasant buildings unroofed or partially destroyed. faced young man who carried a large leather handbag. He was well dressed, but his clothes were covered with dust and his shoes with mud, suggesting that he had been roaming across lots in the rural wards. As the car approached and passed Prospect park it filled up with Sunday strollers.

The young man sat beside the stove, with his bag on his knees. After awhile he opened the bag a triffe, shook it gently and peered attentively inside. Then he put his hand in and seemed to be gently stirring up its contents. The passengers sitting directly opposite to LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 30 .- For over him became interested in his doings, an hour last night this city and vicinity but he didn't look up. There was a movement on the part of the other passengers, partly of alarm at the escape of the young man with the mystery unsolved and partly perhaps of relief at the end of the suspense. One man made a quick jump after the mysterious young man and caught him for a few seconds as he was about to leave the car

"What've y' got? Whatcher doing?" he asked, regardless of all proprieties. The young man looked surprised and then smiled and said:

"Oh, cocoons, chrysalides, moths, you uralists." Then he jumped off the car.
