

OUR CONDITIONS.

Secretary Carlisle's Memphis Speech.

The establishment of a silver standard here could not possibly increase the price of cotton or wheat or any other American product in Liverpool, London, Paris or Berlin, whatever effect it might have upon the nominal price in this country. If our monetary system were so changed that it would require $2 to purchase here the same quantity of commodities that $1 will purchase now, it would not affect the value or purchasing power of the English pound sterling, or the French franc, or the German mark, in the least. But the exchange would be in a constant state of fluctuation, just as it has been between Great Britain and India on account of the changes in the price of silver from day to day; and the American producer would be compelled to pay for the risk taken on account of the fluctuations by receiving a less price for his cotton, wheat, beef and other articles. The farmers and planters do not export their own products, but they sell them at home to somebody else, who sends them abroad, and, if the exchange is steady and the money in which he is to pay for the products has a fixed value relatively to the money in use in the country in which he expects to sell them, the purchaser here can afford to pay the highest price that would leave him a reasonable margin of profit, in view of the conditions existing abroad. In other words he has to incur but one risk—the possible fall in the price of the products abroad; but, if the currency here is depreciated and fluctuating, if our money has no fixed and certain value relatively to the money in use abroad where he expects to sell the products, there is an additional risk to be incurred which will have great influence in determining the price he can afford to pay the producer. In addition to the risk of a fall in the price of the products abroad, he must incur the risk of a rise in the price of silver between the time of his purchase and the time when he receives the proceeds of his sale; for, if silver rises in the meantime, he may not get back as many dollars as he paid out. The producer must pay for both of these risks by receiving a smaller price for his commodities, and hence his price will never increase in proportion to the actual depreciation of the money in which they are paid.

DEMOCRATIC GREED FOR POWER.

The democratic party is a most remarkable party. They are for anything to get power, but they are never for anything which got them power.

They were for free raw materials in the campaign of 1892. But they were opposed to free raw materials after the campaign was successful, and when they possessed the power to make them free.

They were vociferously opposed to trusts in their platform and on the stump when they were trying to get back into office. But it is conceded that they became the willing tools and advocates of trusts when opportunity came to strike the blow against them.

They posed, as the true and only friends of labor during the summer and fall of 1892, and even pointed to the Homestead riots as the direct and logical fruits of republican legislation. But since that time they have inflicted upon American labor the deadliest blow it has ever received. Their policy had reduced wages and beggared labor beyond description.

They promised the farmer better prices for his wheat and wool when they were seeking his vote. But when they once obtained his suffrage their economic policy began to force down the prices daily until they have now reached the lowest point known for nearly fifty years.

They have disappointed every reasonable expectation they raised in the campaign of 1892, but justified every fear or evil prediction urged against them. They have ignored every promise. They have disregarded every obligation. They have broken faith with a trusting people and exposed their insincerity and double dealing.

They appear before the American people today totally discredited and in disgrace, upon their own confessions, before the close of half of the presidential term. They have utterly failed to redeem any pledge made to the people, and after more than a year's continuous session of congress are forced to acknowledge their infirmity, imbecility and the lack of united purpose to carry out any single one of the great promises of the campaign. They have exhibited their inherent weakness and have disclosed irreconcilable differences within the party.

Bryan Ashamed of His Record.

"What's the use of discussing the Tariff?" was the reply of Candidate Bryan to the request made by one of his hearers that he "say something about the Tariff." Millions of people want Mr. Bryan "to say something about the Tariff," and yet Mr. Bryan remains silent. But silence will not avail him. Fortunately, he has said "something about the Tariff" in the past. In fact he has said a good deal about the Tariff. His record is clear, his unflinching devotion to absolute free-trade openly declared. He has not changed his belief, he cannot blot out his record, nothing he can say can explain away the distress and disaster which have come from the "first step toward free-trade" that he voted for. Hard experience has been a bitter teacher, but a sure one. There is "no use" in Mr. Bryan's discussing the Tariff. His only hope exists in being able to turn the attention of the country away from it, to make a new issue, to have the people forget his record. But they will not forget.

The United States has the greatest amount of coined silver of any enlightened nation on earth.
