Justice Court for the Precinct of Looking Glass, County of Douglas, Oregon. Wm. Norcross, Plaintiff vs. J. L. Hunting, Defendant. Recover money. To J. L. Hunting, in the name of the State of Oregon. You are hereby required to appear before the undersigned, a Justice of the Peace for the precinct aforesaid, on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1896, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the office of said Justice in said precinct, to answer the above-named plaintiff in a civil action. The defendant will take notice that if he fails to answer the complaint herein, the plaintiff will take judgment against him for the sum of $200.00 and costs of this action. Given under my hand this 3rd day of October A. D. 1896. O. B. BELL, Justice of the Peace.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all whom it may concern that I have appointed D. W. Rogers of California precinct Deputy Inspector of Stock for said precinct; postoffice address, Oakland; also A. J. Chapman of Wilbur, and Ralph Smith, at Roseburg, to act during my absence, and others will be added as parties inspected make their depositions to me. Roseburg, May 4th, 1887. THOS. SMITH, Inspector of Stock for Douglas county, Or.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The weights and measures used in the United States during our early history were those which had come into use among the colonies, some being borrowed from England, others having arisen in a haphazard fashion by the necessities of commerce. The first legislation on the subject, when the discrepancies among the weights and measures of the various States showed the necessity for a common standard, was in 1817, when John Quincy Adams was commissioned to examine into the subject. Mr. Adams had the standards employed in the various custom houses carefully examined and measured during the year 1819-20, his report showing enormous discrepancies not only in the different States, but even in the same State. "By an act of Congress, May 10, 1828, the brass Troy pound procured by the American Minister at London in 1827, which was a copy prepared by Capt. Kater of the English standard, was declared the standard Troy pound of the mint of the United States, conformably to which its coinage should be regulated. The Senate, May 29, 1830, directed a new comparison of the weights and measures in use at the different custom houses. This was intrusted to Prof. Hassler, and though much discrepancy was found, the mean corresponded closely with the English standards verified in 1776. Under Mr. Hassler's supervision, accurate copies of the received standards of weights and measures were supplied to all custom houses. Meanwhile, by a joint resolution of Congress, June 14, 1836, the Secretary of the Treasury was directed to cause a complete set of all the weights and measures adopted as standards to be delivered to the Governor of each State in the Union for the use of the states respectively. These as well as accurate balances for adjusting the weights, have been supplied, and the statutory standards of every state have been made conformable to the standards so furnished. Congress has never made any enactment in reference to the old English standards which have come down to us, since the latter were necessarily in force as the national standards, unless changed by legislative enactment. The only exception is the legalization of the Troy pound, used in the mint, which is identical with the corresponding British Troy pound. The standards of weight and measure are preserved in Washington, and, as stated, copies identical in every respect have been furnished, or should have been furnished, to every state government for preservation.

The Jewish Maternity Home, of Philadelphia, is doing a wonderful work. During the past month 124 new and 171 old cases were treated, making a total of 295. The women directors of this Philadelphia association have just issued an annual report, showing that 2201 medical and surgical treatments were gratuitously given to poor people, and 292 prescriptions compounded. Three hundred and twenty-five patients were entertained during the summer at the Atlantic City Seaside Home, which is under the auspices of the society.

Mrs. Sarah Spencer Morgan, of Irvington-on-Hudson, who died a few weeks ago while she was in Germany left her husband just $1,000,000 in bonds, also her handsome New York residence and one-fifth of the income for life of a trust fund. Her magnificent paintings are to be divided between her daughter and her sons, the former to receive in addition her costly jewels and ornaments. Each child receives a one-third life interest in the residue of her estate. Mrs. Morgan's personal estate was valued at $850,000, and her real estate at $600,000.

Baroness Bartlett-Coutts once ordered a cake weighing 90 pounds, which she sent to Charles Dickens, jr., when he was but 7 years of age. It is not generally known that the distinguished gentleman, Mr. Dickens, the eldest son of the great novelist, was an especial favorite of the baroness, and that she supervised his education, defraying the expenses herself, and even sending him to Germany for commercial study. She will continue to evince interest in the eight daughter who survive him.

The latest luxury for a woman's lap dog is his umbrella. It covers him from the tip of his small nose to the last wag of his little tail, and is strapped firmly on his back in an upright and open position. What with his india rubber boots his mackintosh and his umbrella, he can defy the elements, and what a much happier and more comfortable life will be for the air and exercise.

Justin McCarthy is quite gray-haired. His beard is bushy and his gold-rimmed spectacles impart a benign air to his face which indeed well suits this mild-mannered little gentleman. As for his energy, one would say that it was inexhaustible. He is a politician, a journalist, a novelist and a historian. Added to this he writes poetry.

Notice is hereby given that for the purpose of examining all persons who may apply for certificates to teach in the public schools of Douglas county, Oregon, the superintendent thereof will hold a public examination at Roseburg, commencing Wednesday, November 11 1896, at 1 o'clock p. m. Dated this 22d day of October, 1896. DOUGLAS WAITE, County School Superintendent.

SEALING IN LABRADOR.

Late in February the Newfoundland sealing steamers break through the ice in St. John's harbor and make their way to some northern outpost, lying there until March 10, the earliest date on which the law allows them to "go to the ice." They stand out to sea until they meet the immense fields of ice from the Arctic ocean. These fields are often many square miles in extent and fairly teem with seals. A great seal hunter told me that the sea seemed suddenly converted into an ocean of seals and ice. The steamer breaks into the jam and floats with it or skirts along the edge, the crew, 300 or 300 in number, taking to the floating ice and living there for days and nights.

The young seals fatten so rapidly that sealers say you can actually see them grow while you are looking at them. The poor creatures are easily killed, a blow with the butt end of a gaff finishing them. The hunter then "sculps," or skins them, inserting a sharp knife under the fat, and with marvelous dexterity taking off the "pelts"—skin and half together—in about a minute and a half. A party of men will "pan" their pelts—pile them up to the number of about 1,000 and thrust a gaff with the ship's flag into the pan. When there are pans enough, the steamer breaks into the ice and hauls them aboard with a donkey winch, or the men drag them to the vessel's side.

The Newfoundland seal hunters always speak of seals as "swiles," and for our word carry they say "spell," and a schoolmaster who had been listening to a seal hunter's story said sneeringly: "Swiles! How do you spell swiles?" "We don't spell 'em," replied the hunter; "we most generally haul 'em!"—Gustav Kobbe in St. Nicholas.

The Other Kind.

Not long ago a well dressed woman entered the savings bank in a western town and told the clerk that she wished to deposit some money to the credit of George Sampson.

Recognizing her as the wife of a man of that name, who already had an account open, the clerk rightly guessed that the money in question was to start an account for one of her children.

"Is he a minor?" he inquired.

"Well, I guess not!" responded the depositor indignantly. "That's something we've never had in our family yet! And if Georgio shows any leaning toward it when he gets old enough—he ain't but 10 now—I reckon his pa can't tell him yarns about nines exploding and shafts fallin on top of folks that'll settle him quicker'n a wink!"—Youth's Companion.

Orange Trees.

An orange grove in full bearing is one of the most delightful sights the eye can witness. The trees are a beautiful shape if left as nature made them. The limbs come nearly to the ground—so close that an orange picker goes under the tree flat on his back and often cuts 100 oranges from the tree before he comes out. Oranges are never picked, but are cut off with shears having a spring between the handles. An orange that has no stem on it is considered a "cull" and is not packed by a first class packer.—Pomona (Cal.) Progress.

What the Boston Man Said.

"Believe me, dear, I love you more than life. I swear by the honor of my ancestors, by my hopes of happiness, by the sacred cod!"

"Ah, Harold! Now indeed I believe you!"—New York Recorder.

SAYREVILLE'S AMAZING HUES.

A Jersey Blasphemy in Yellow Set in a Symphony of Blue.

Probably the most remarkable bit of color to be found within a radius of 100 miles from this city is the little hamlet of Sayreville, N. J. From an artist's point of view Sayreville is impressionistic in the nightmare sense of the word. Its surroundings are beautiful, for it stands on a little bluff overlooking a spreading marsh, through the center of which a sparkling river runs to lose itself in a rift of the faraway hills. The marsh is a dull, grayish blue, the river gives a steel blue effect, and far away the distance of the hills blends in soft gradations into the hue of the sky. In the midst of this gem of a landscape stands Sayreville, yellow in every sense of the word. It is a blasphemy in yellow set in a symphony in blue.

In the neighboring villages there is a legend as to how Sayreville became yellow. They say that when the town was first built there wasn't a painted house in it, and that one day an enterprising peddler on his notion selling rounds saw in this an opportunity for money making. He procured a large quantity of damaged paint at a nearby city, all of the paint being in various hues of yellow, from bright orange down to the duldest buff. This paint he carted to Sayreville and sold at low prices, and still with large profit to himself. Then the town set about painting itself yellow. Some of the people pooled their interests and their paints and ornamented their houses with the combination. Others ran to stripes, and having used up one tint filled in with the rest. One man tried polka dots in chrome on a background of greenish buff, with brilliant effect. When the work was done, the peddler came back with a big consignment of starting green, which the townspeople bought, and with which they painted their blinds. The result was pleasing to the Sayrevillers, but startling to such few outsiders as chanced to journey to that town.

In the course of time two householders found courage to break away from the prevailing yellowness. One repainted his house in robin's egg blue, the other tinted his a deep magenta, and now these two buildings stand out conspicuously and give just enough color tone to the village to accentuate its amazing effects in yellow.—New York Sun.
